*Running from the beach
To the ivy'd brick
The sand still sticking stubbornly
To our impatient, wet feet . . .*

*Summoned by forms, hallguards,
Questionnaires, and secretaries
To identify ourselves
We began to wonder if we really knew...*

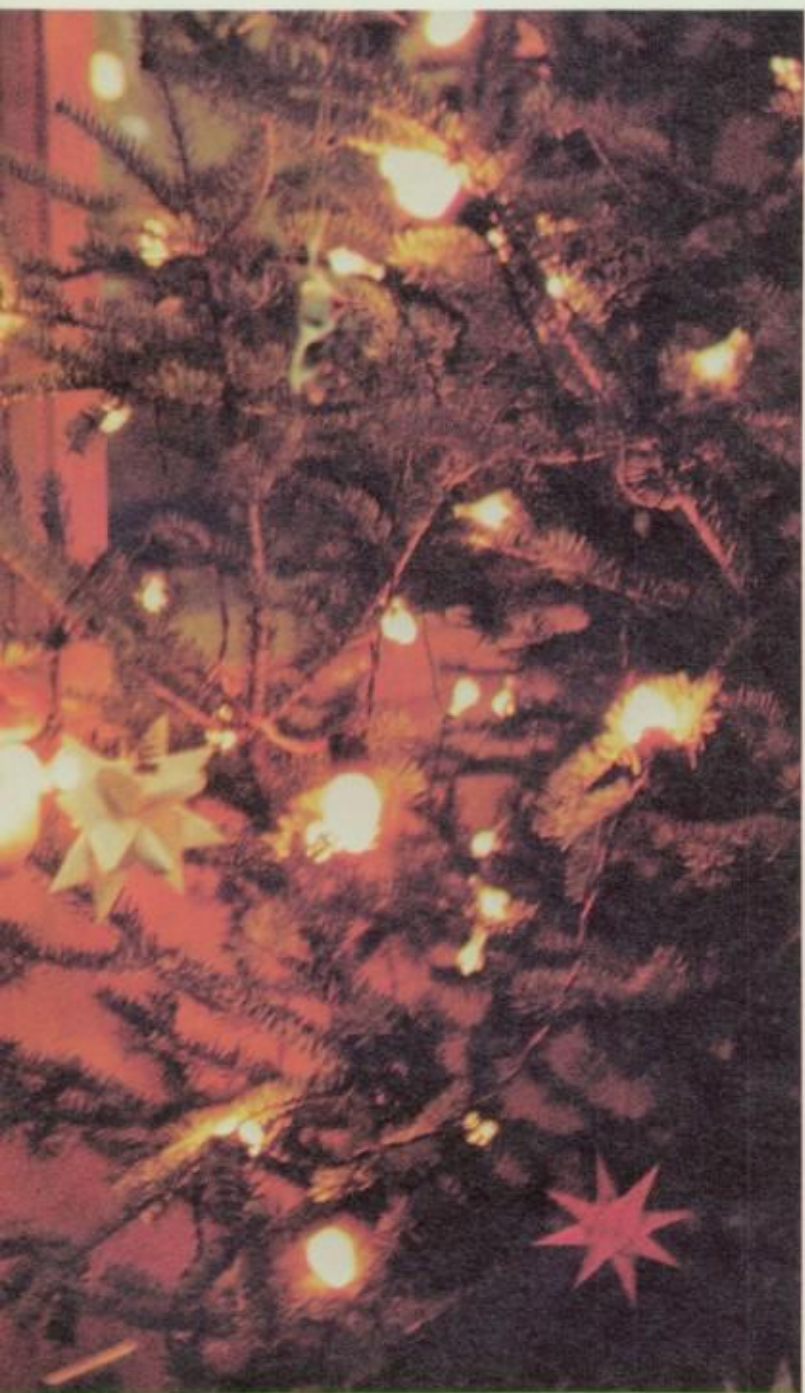

*Running through the town
Pulling crepe paper carts
As goblins ran rampant
("Is there no cure?"
Asked Booze the Clown) . . .*

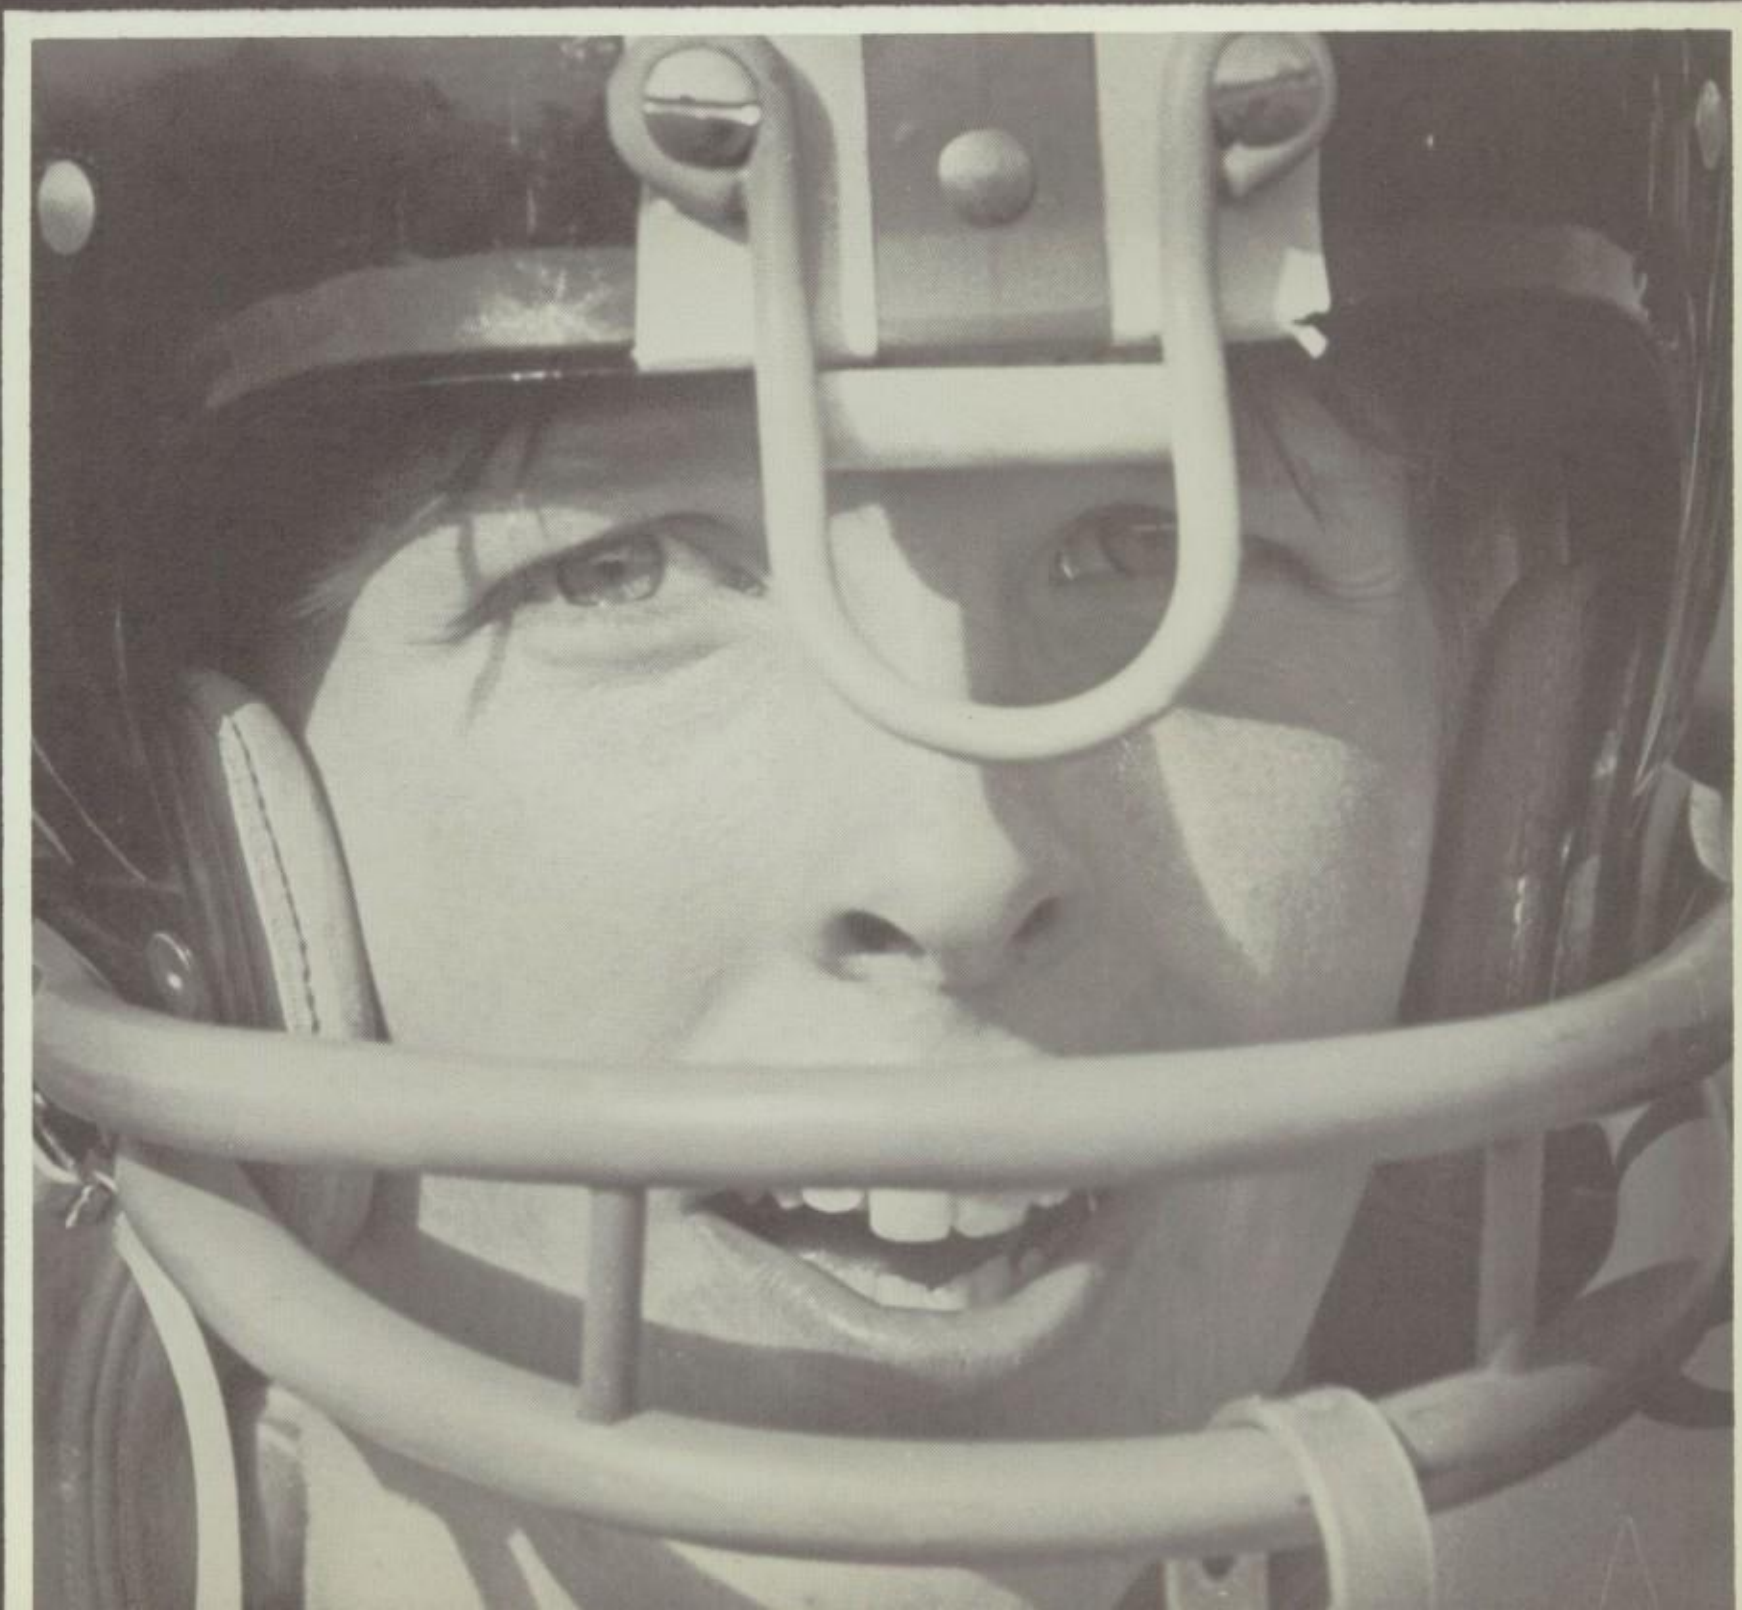

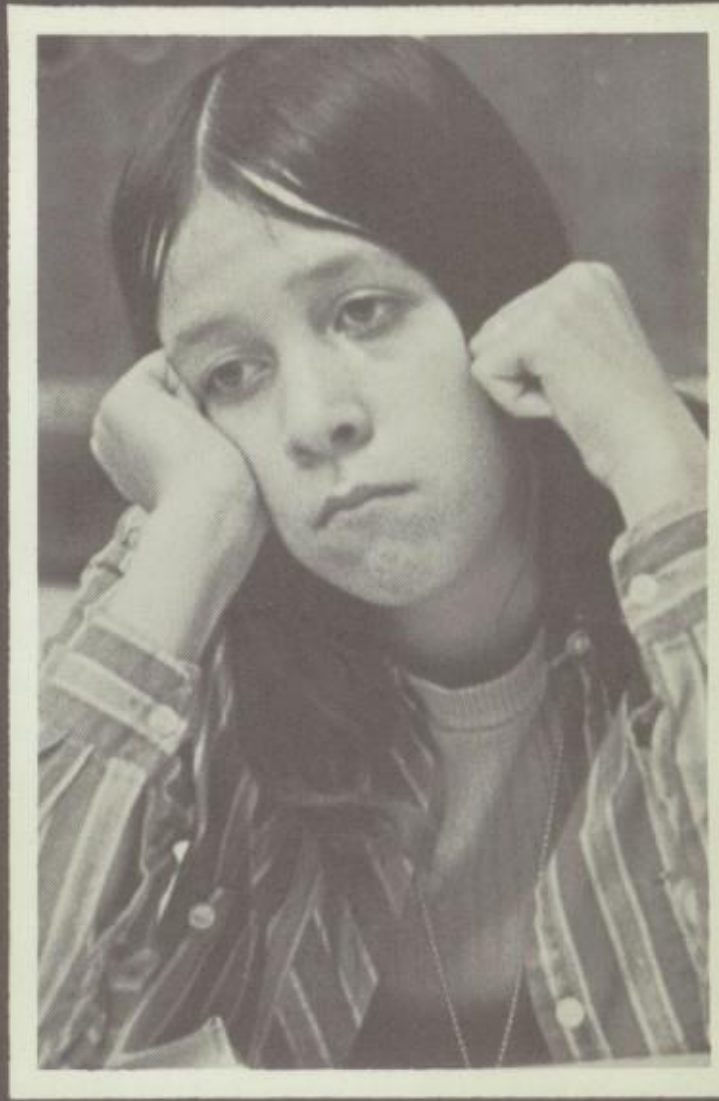

*But there was no answer.
We asked the old brown school buses,
The rackets, nets, and birdies,
The brass and percussion,
The queen of hearts, king of clubs, and jack of spades,
The boxcars,
And even the gymshoed cagers,
But there was no answer...*

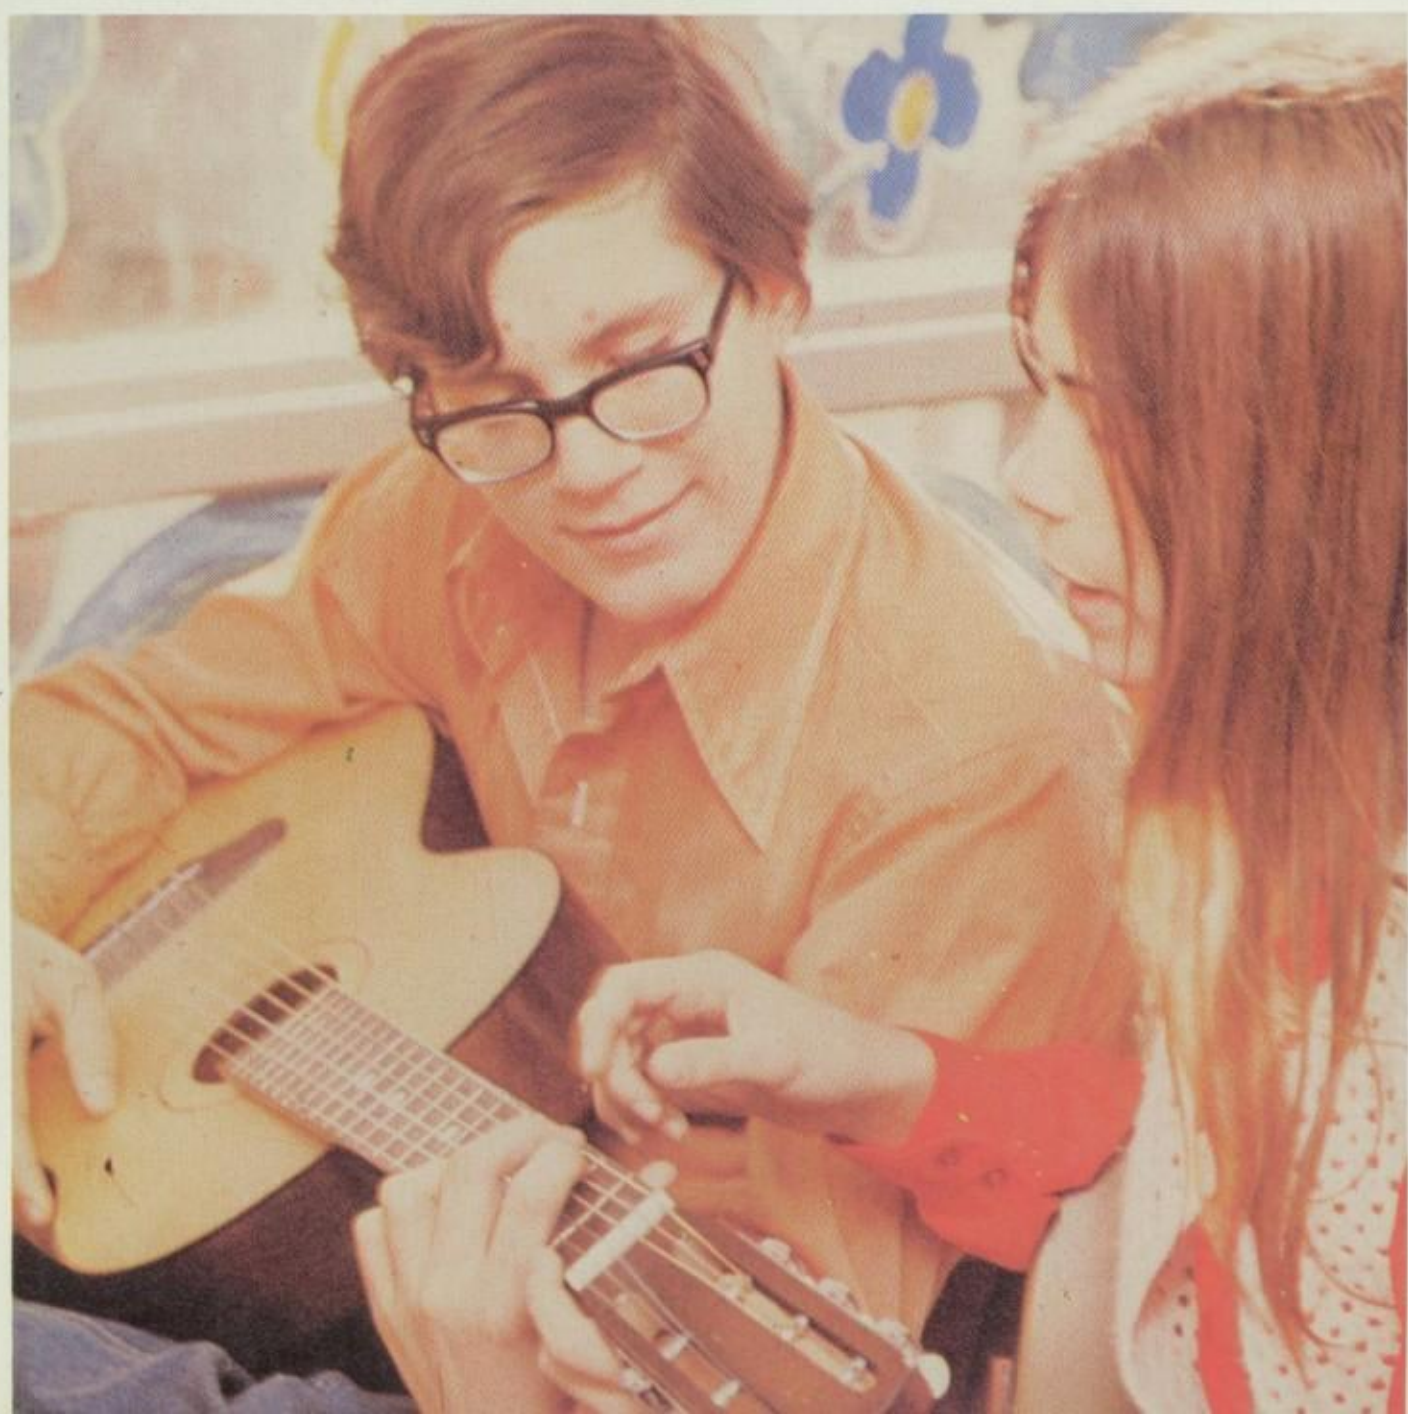

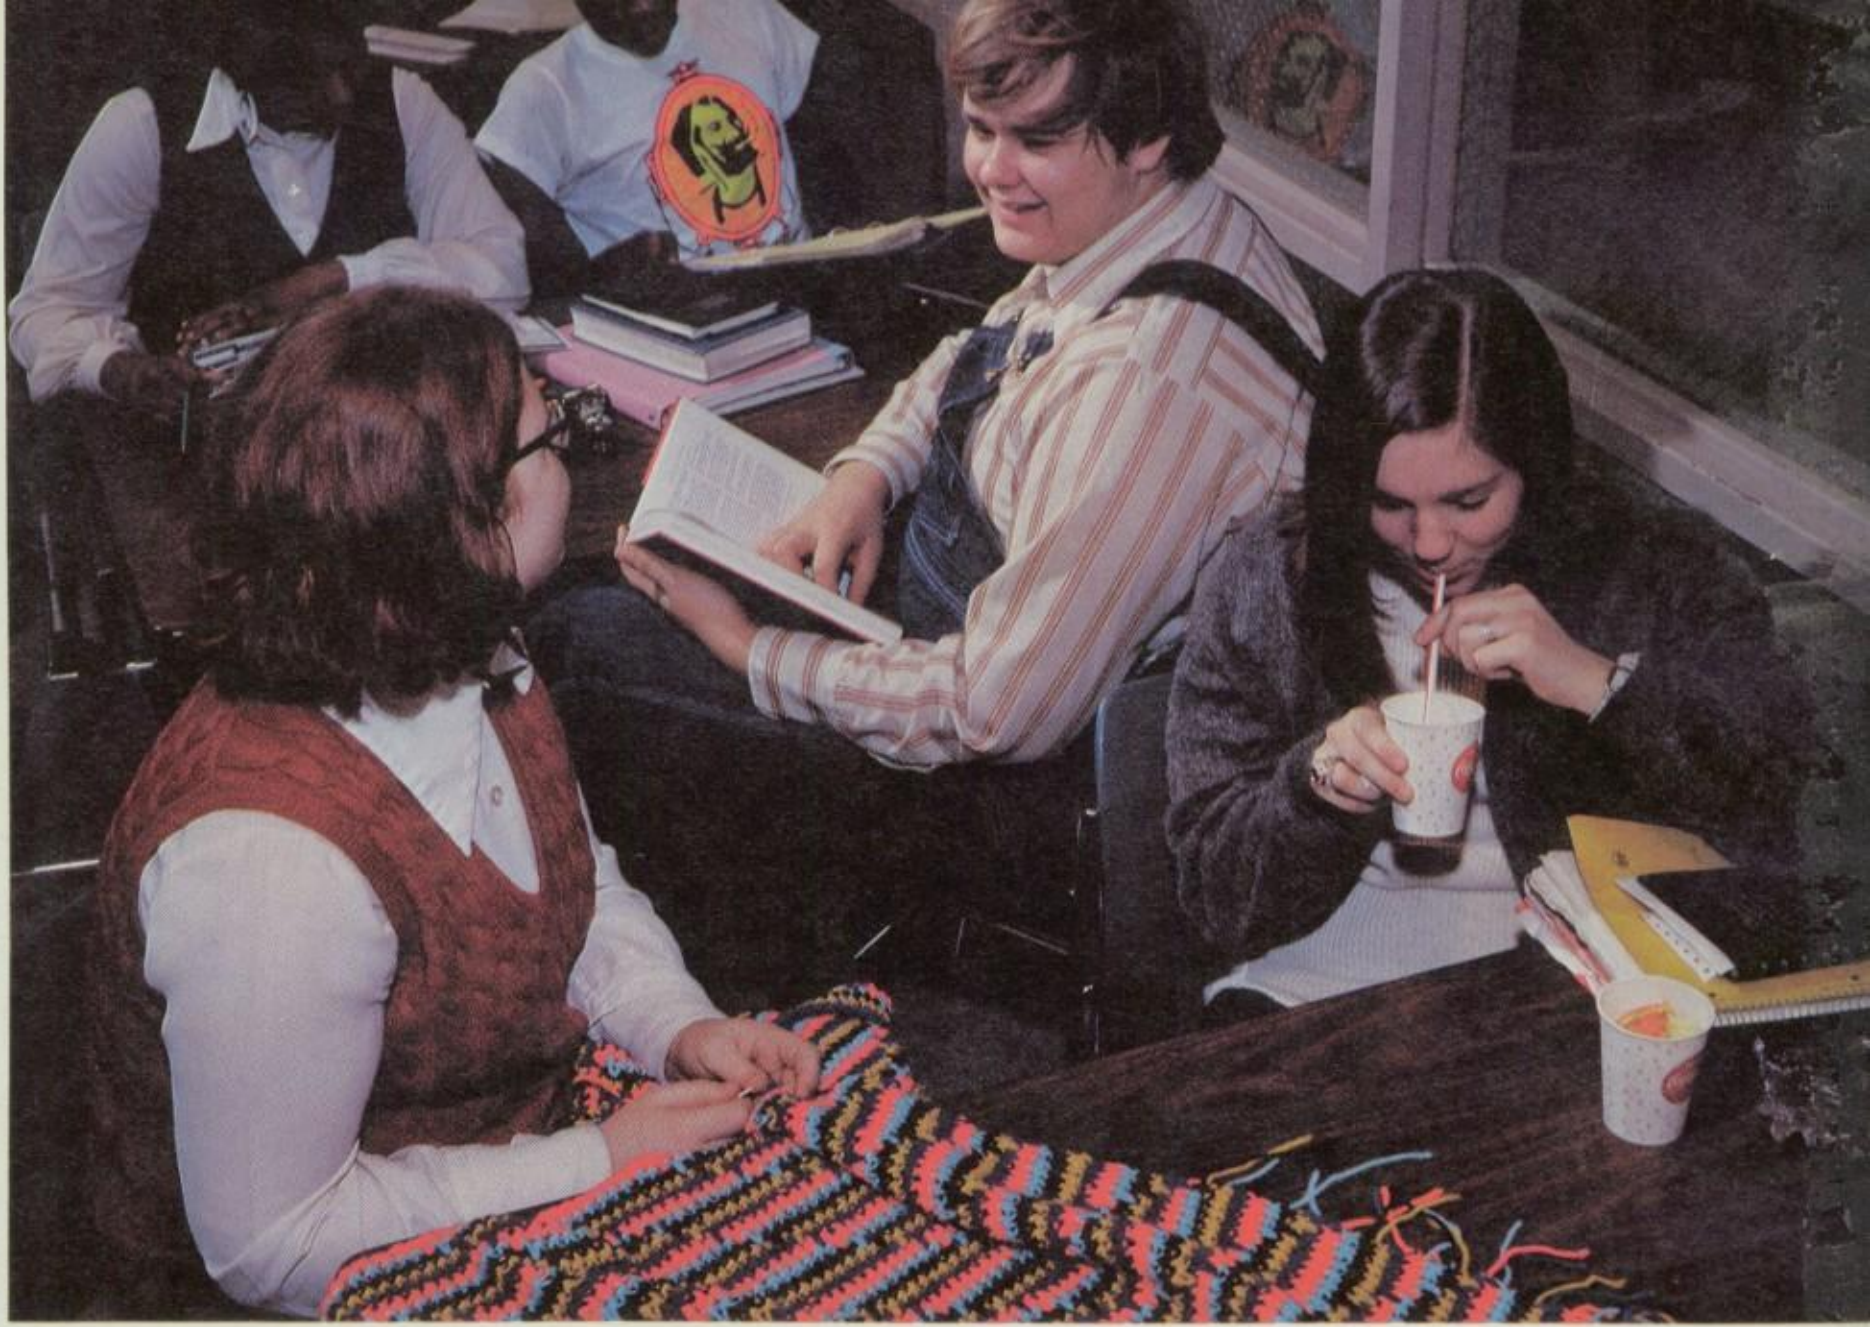

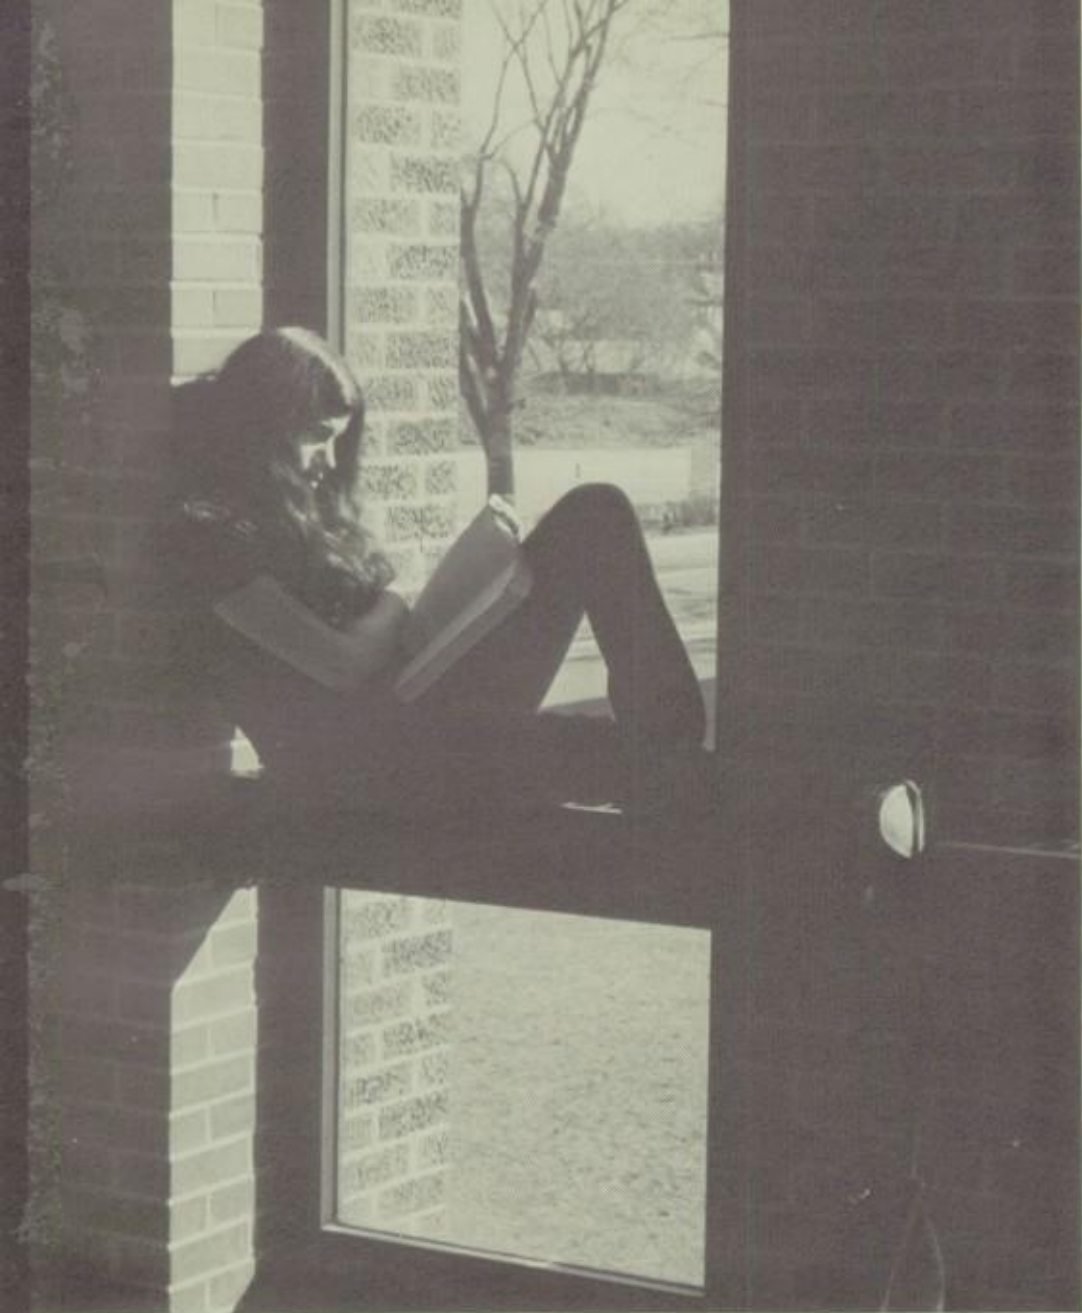

*So we brought out the tinsel
Lit the hearth
Eating number two pencils for breakfast . . .*

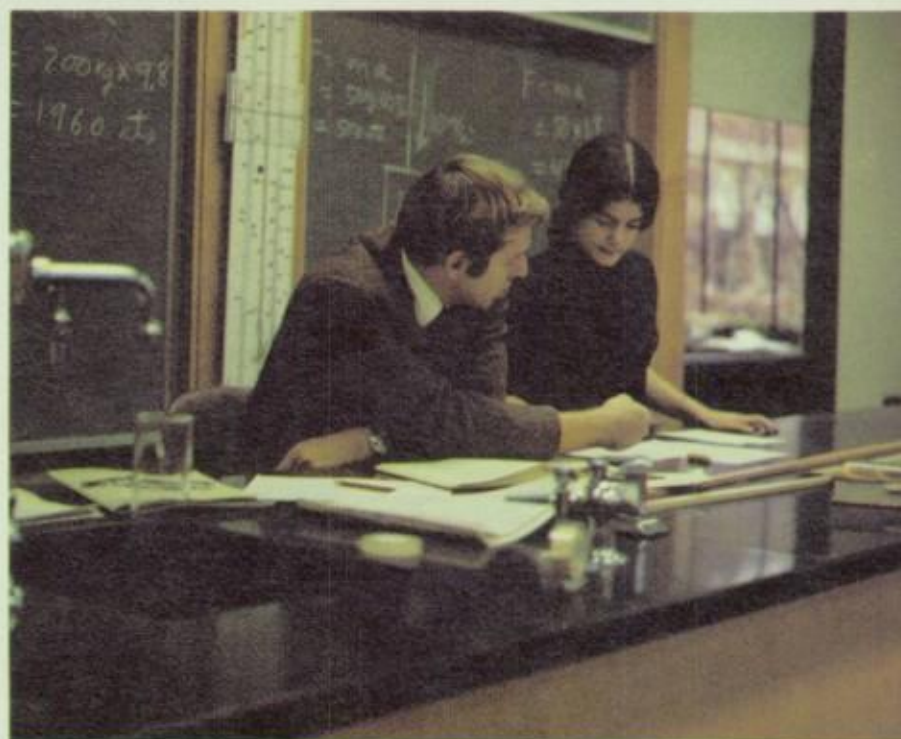

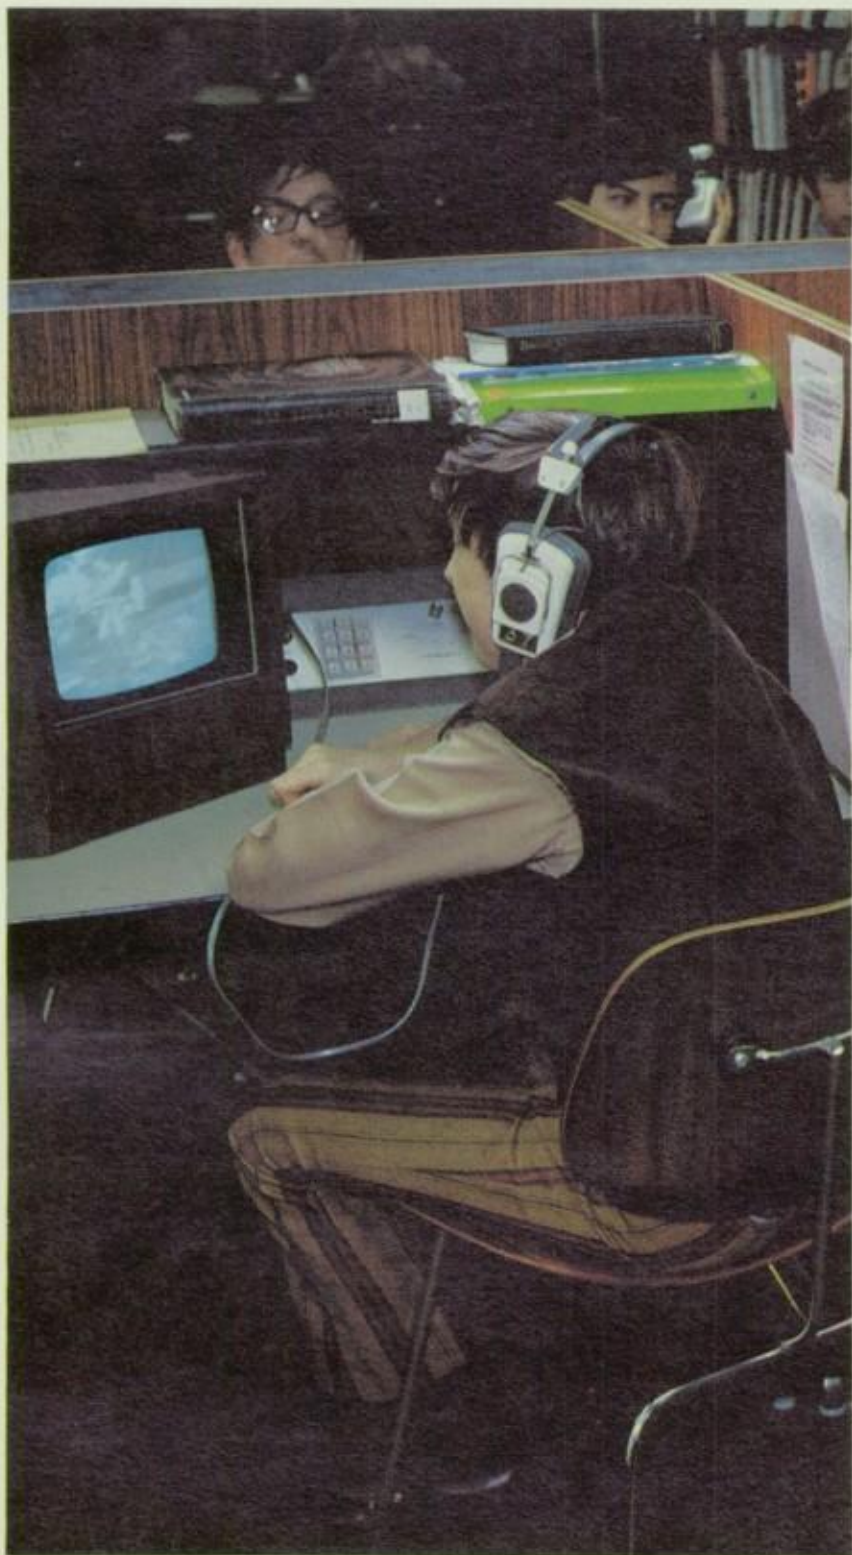

*(While toothy,
Smiling,
Bored,
Tired faces kept asking)...*

*Savoring not the cerealburgers
But consuming free modules ravenously
Then resuming our running . . .*

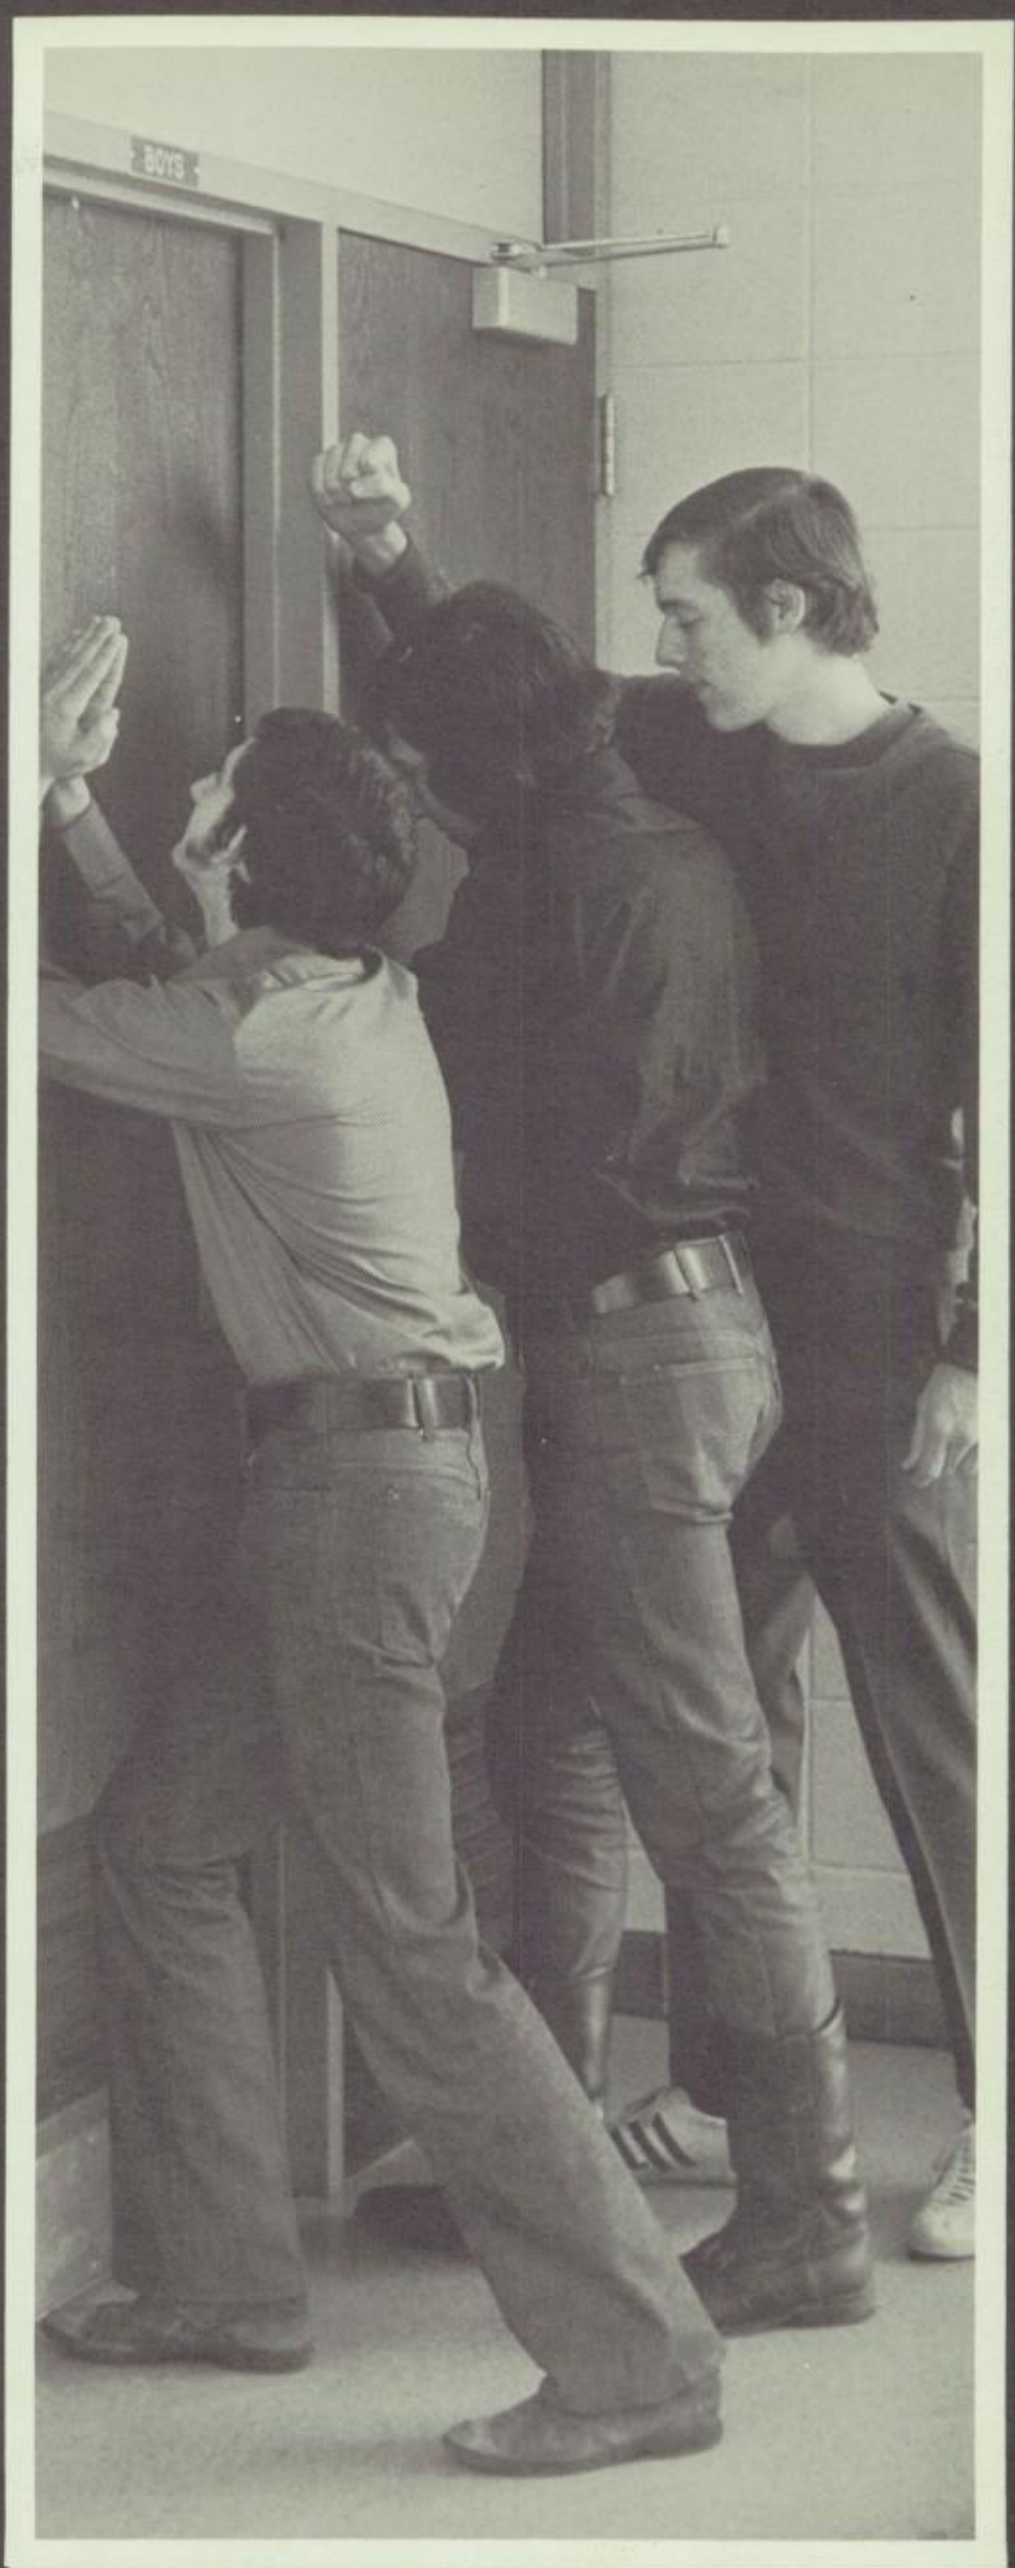

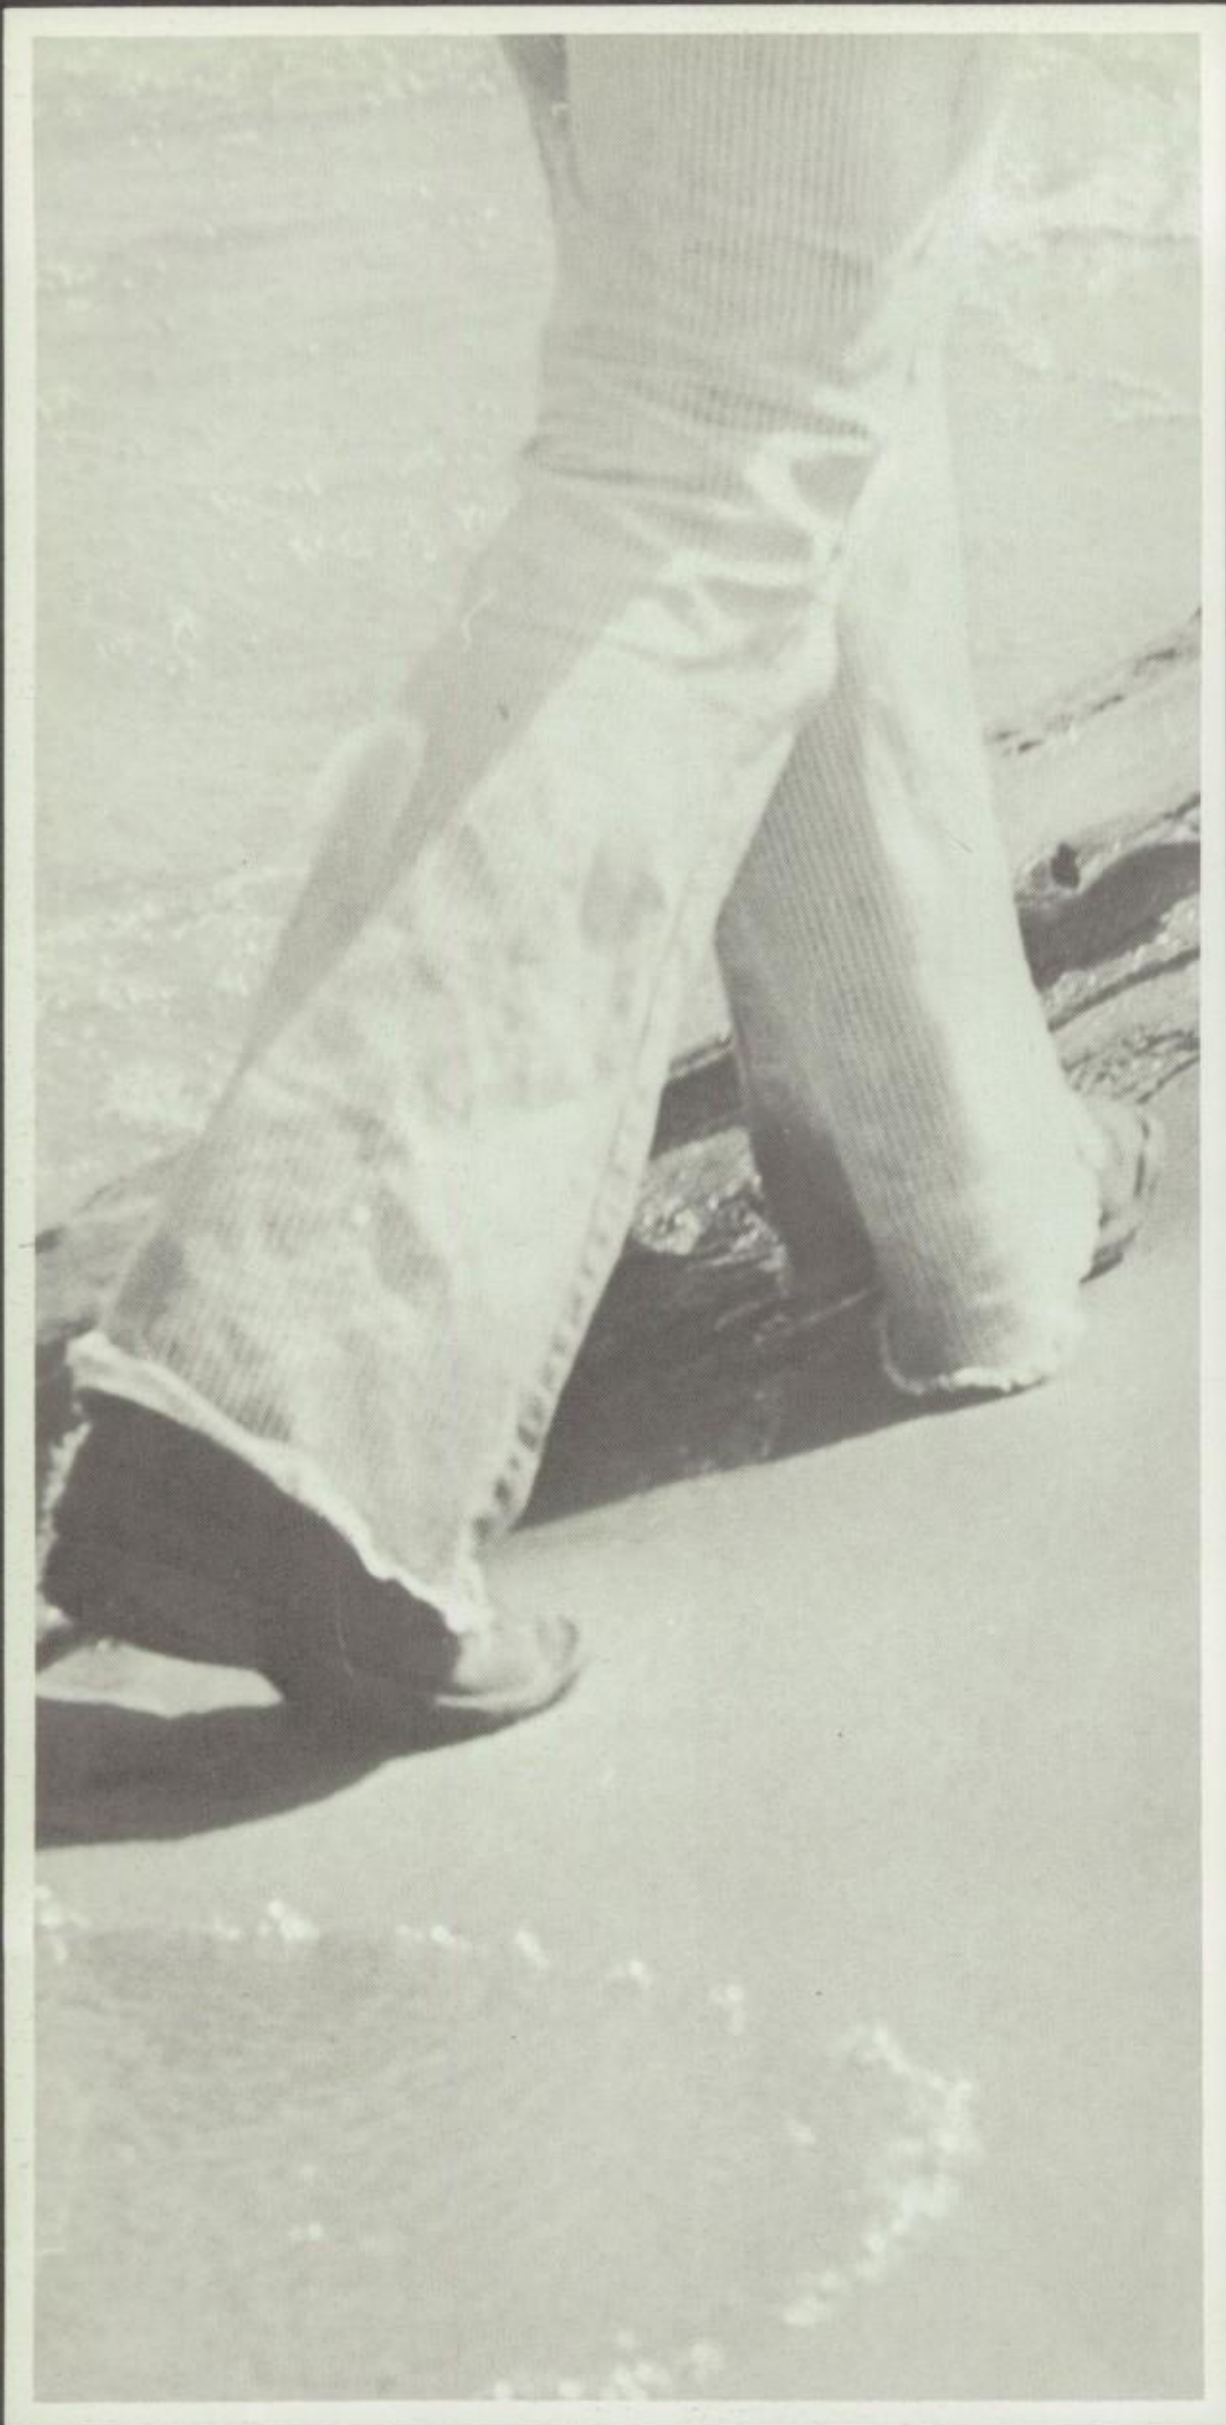

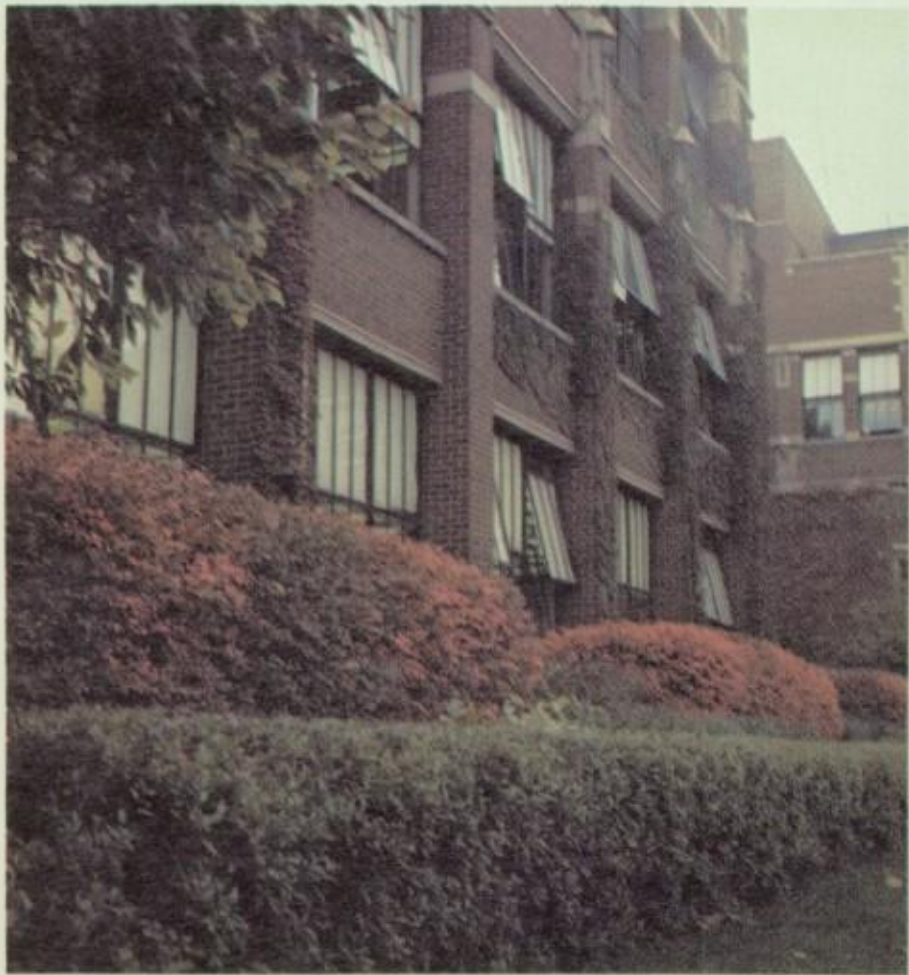

*Stopping, gasping for breath
At the seminar doors
Invited in by variegated vinyl chairs . . .*

*Selling lollipops and balloons
Leaving larger causes
Locked in last year's grief-box...*

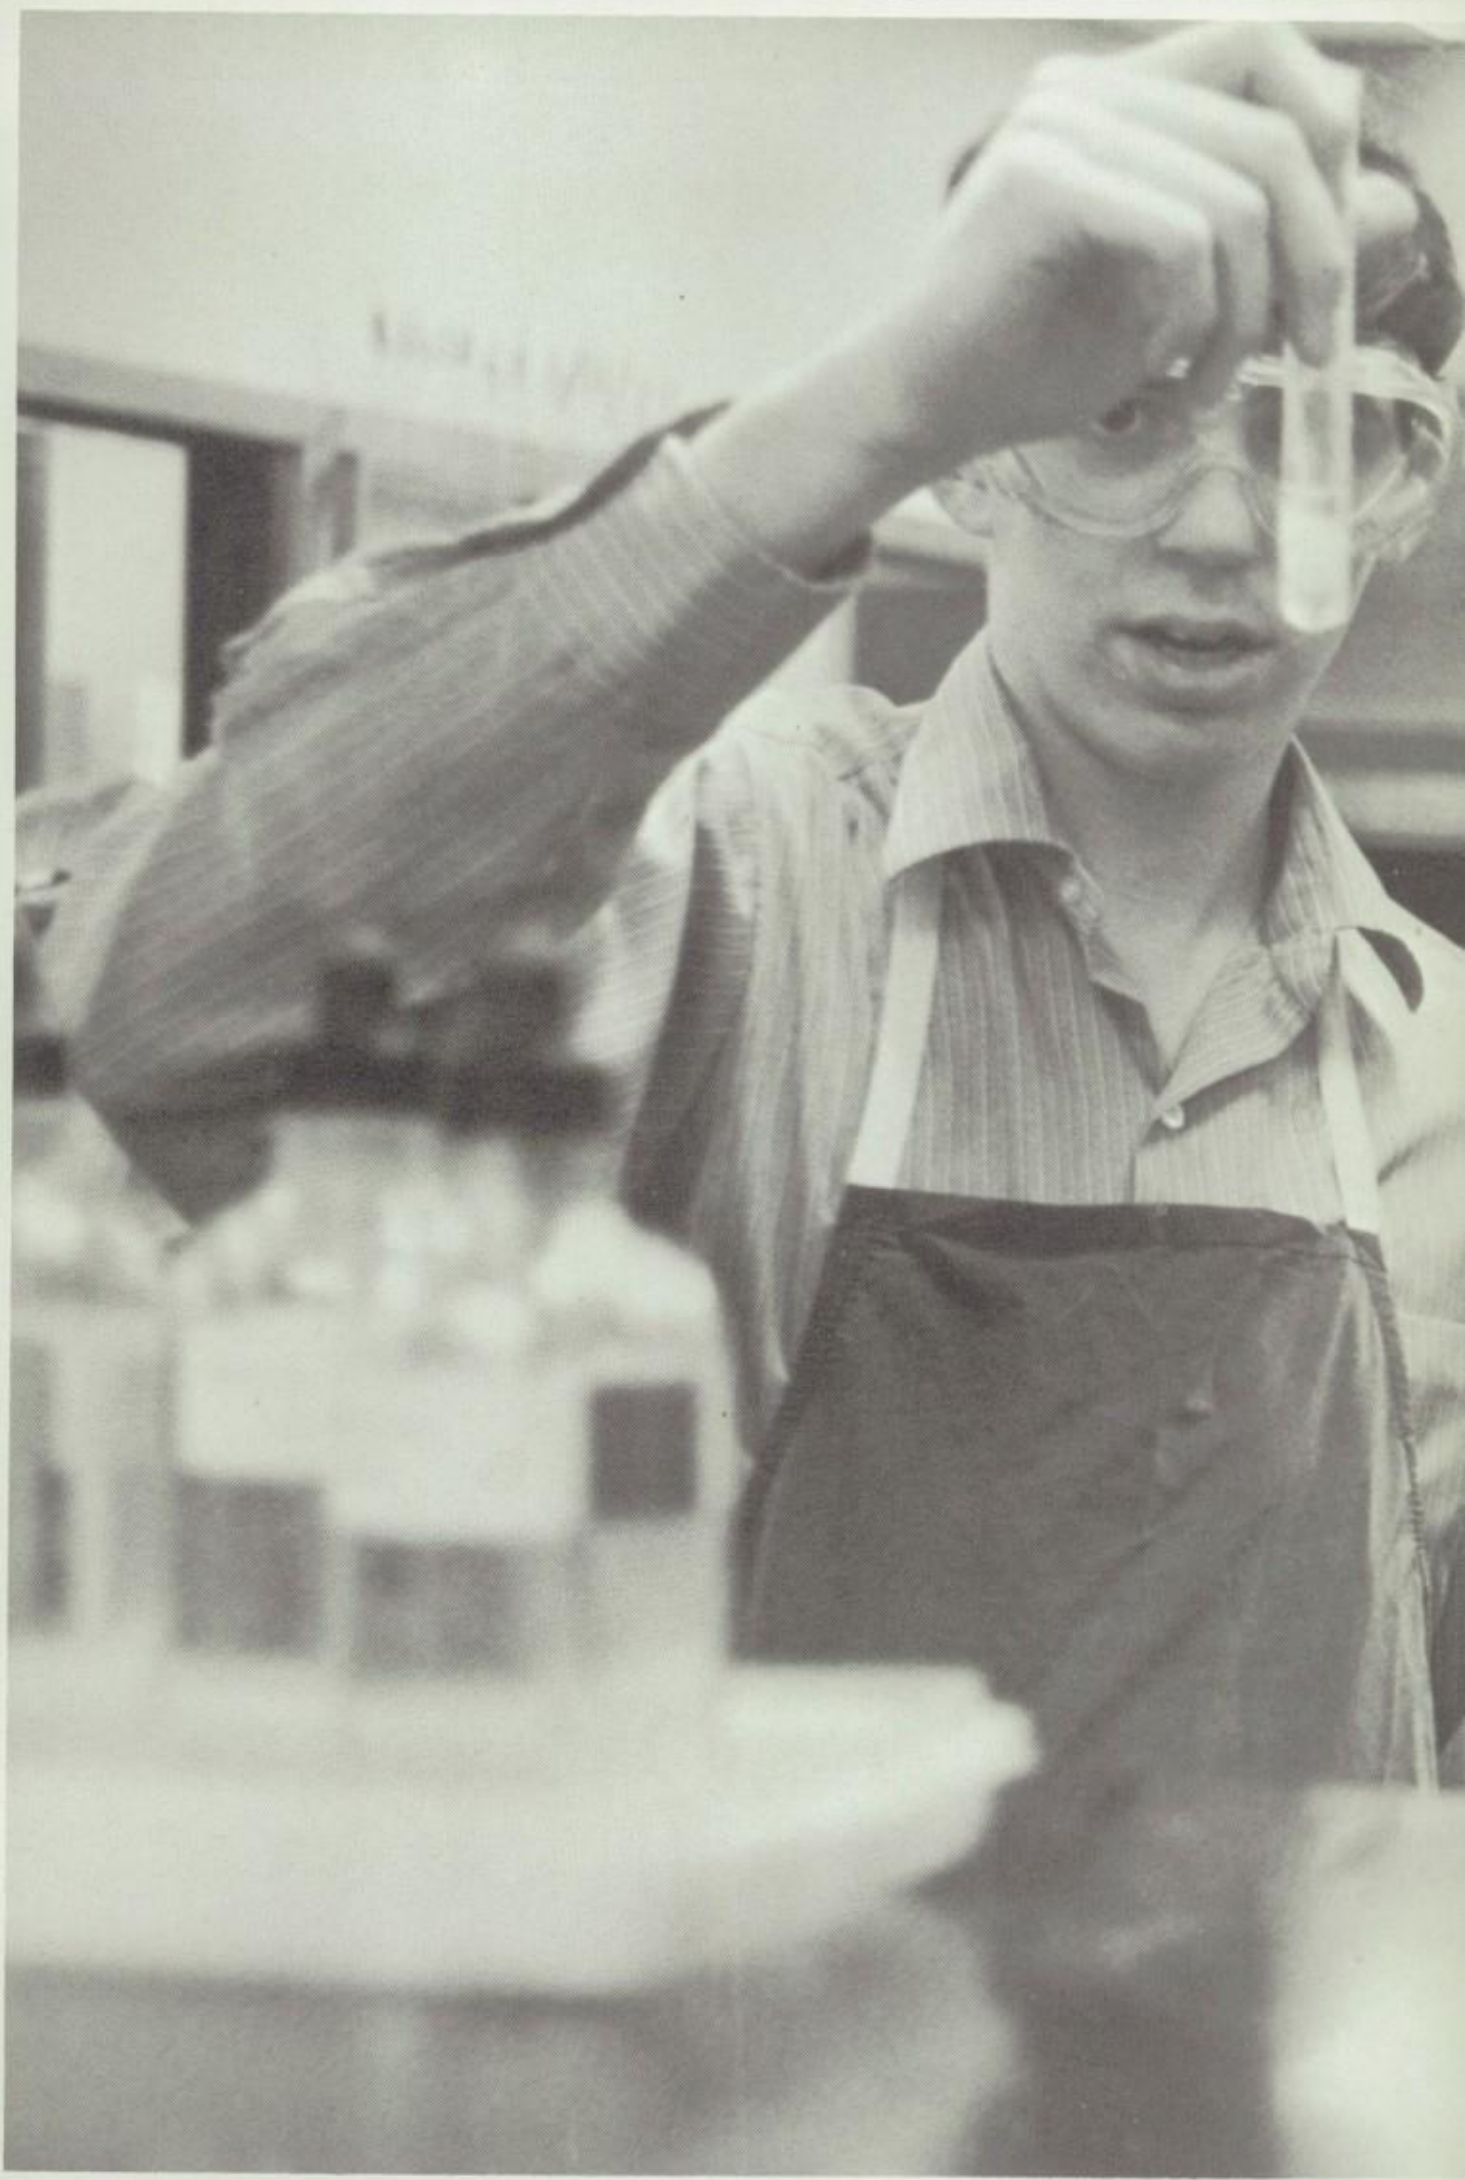

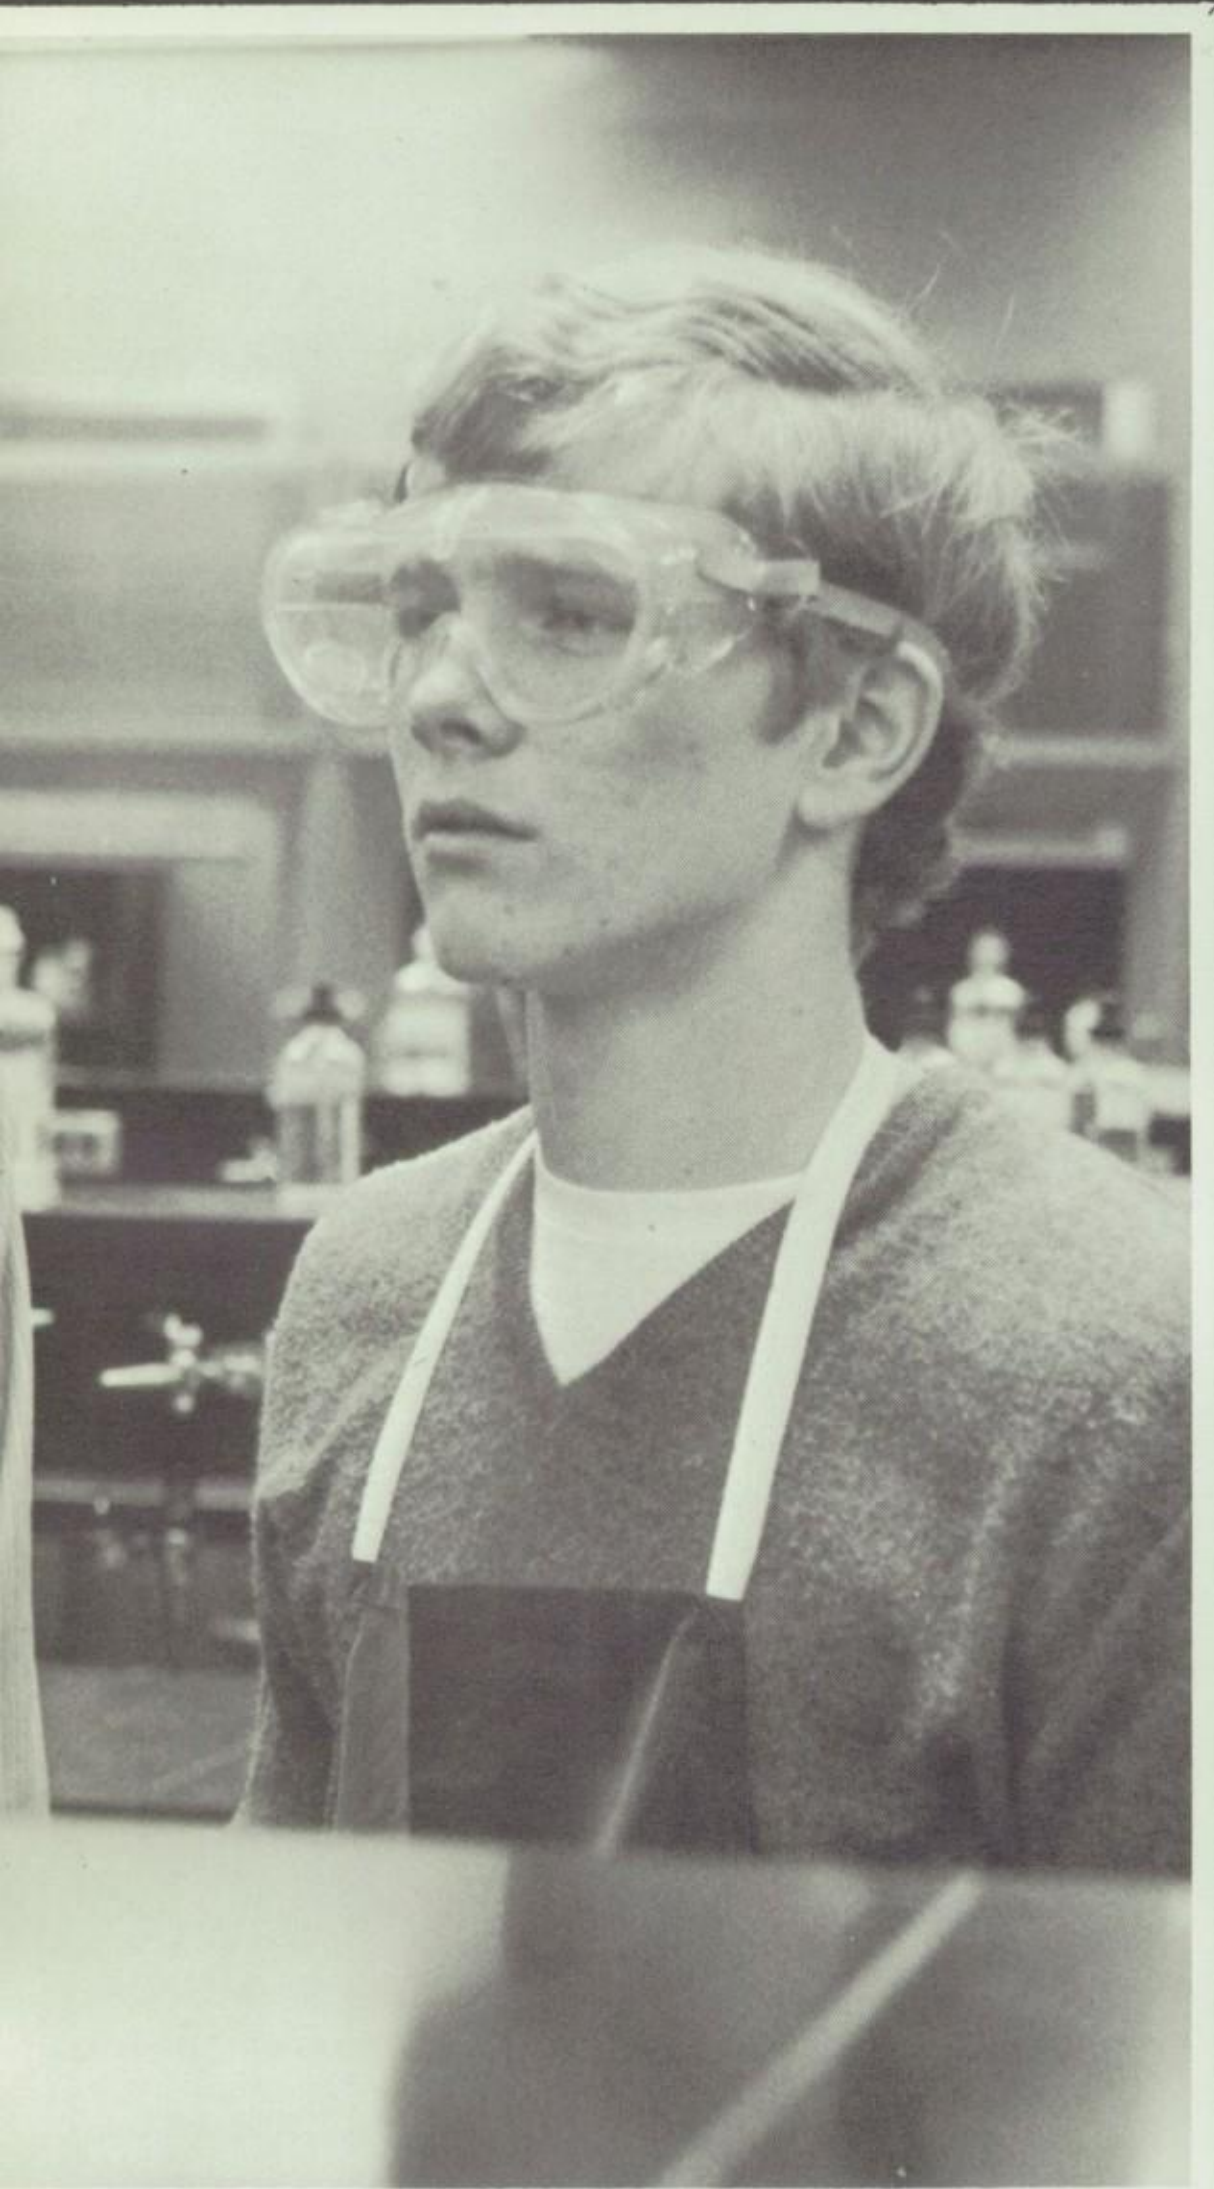

*Leaving it all until
We could envision
Running to the beach
Again . . .*

*For once upon a time
There was this moocow
Who slept and slumped
And awakened to find himself in a cap and gown.*

management, scheduling, open campus studied

DR. SCOTT D. THOMSON: Superintendent

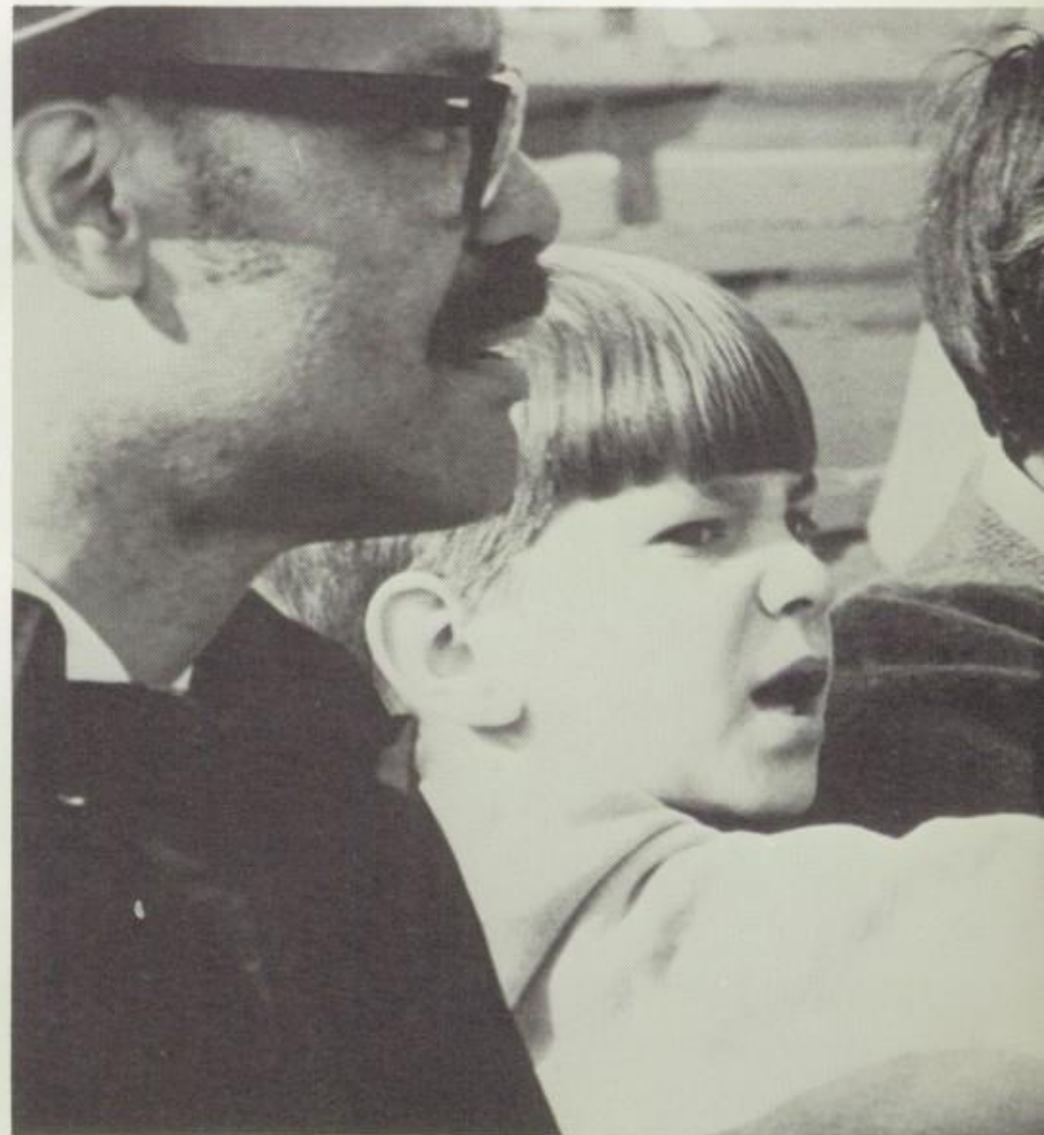

A management study was made of the ETHS four-schools-in-one concept by a three-man consultant group headed by Dr. John Brubacher, Professor of Education at the University of Connecticut. Three members of the Board of Education worked with the team, whose evaluation was used in conjunction with the NCA (North Central Association) report to create reforms in the administrative organization.

Superintendent Dr. Scott D. Thomson chaired the Steering Committee on Class Scheduling, which analyzed modular scheduling. After distributing questionnaires to both faculty and parents, the committee found that there was a need for tighter scheduling for the younger and more immature student who could not yet handle all the free time made available to him under the modular system.

District 202 made a joint agreement with Elementary School District 65 to construct or purchase a building and to provide a program for the trainable mentally handicapped student. Until the building is acquired, these students would continue to attend a special private school such as the Shore School and Training Center in Evanston.

Dr. Thomson appointed a committee of four PTA presidents, four members of the Lay Advisory Council, four teachers, eight students, one counselor, and one administrator to study the open campus proposal created by the Beardsley School Policy Committee. Open campus systems used at Rockford and Niles High Schools were studied by the committee.

DR. DONALD TORRESON: Assistant Superintendent

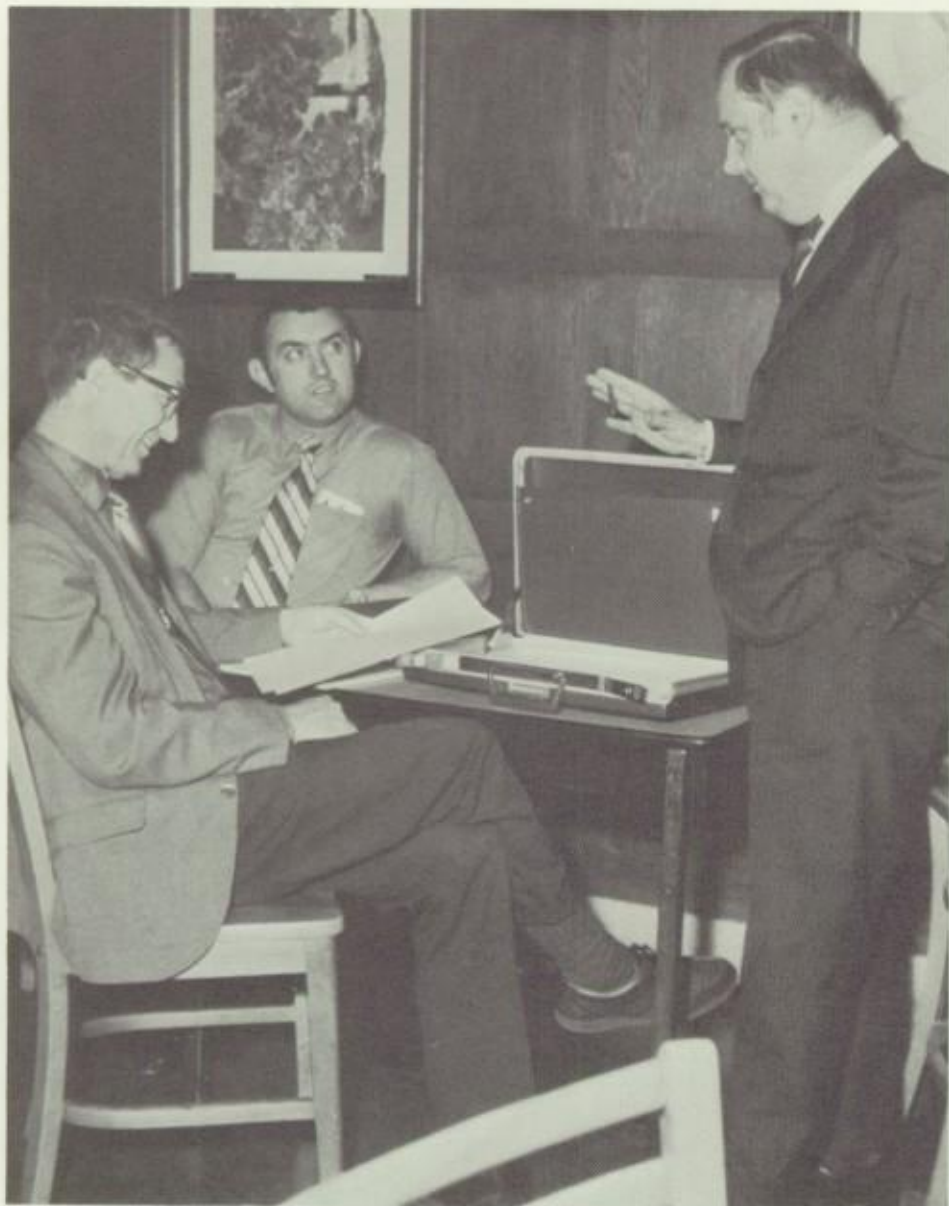

Director of Public Information Services Mrs. Jill Niemoth conceived, produced, and moderated "Talk About Schools," broadcast the first and third Tuesdays of each month at 3:35 p.m. on radio station WEAW AM and FM. As a joint project with Evanston Elementary School District 65, the show featured District 202 Superintendent Dr. Scott Thomson and District 65 Interim Chief Administrator Mr. Joe Hill. Mrs. Niemoth also continued to coordinate the over-all communications program of District 202, including the preparation of Here's Your High School, the compilation of a statistical report booklet, and the publication of The Annual Report.

Over 2100 students were enrolled in the Evening School Program, under the direction of Mr. Walter Rasmussen. A special series of courses taught in the Spanish language was offered beginning the winter quarter, including instruction in Radio and Electronics, Automobile Mechanics, Typing, and preparation for the Civil Service Test.

Supervisor of Buildings and Grounds Mr. Melvin Pettit headed the school's 60 food service workers, 52 custodians, 11 security officers, 11 engineers, 6 wash-room matrons, and 4 maintenance men. With the aid of three night watchmen, two campus policemen, five internal security men, and Security Chief Mr. Richard Goggins, Mr. Pettit sought to prevent vandalism and student disturbance.

A meeting with department heads provided the NCA with an opportunity to review ETHS curriculum in general.

Dr. John Stanovich, head of the NCA evaluating team, compares his reactions to ETHS with those of his staff members.

a shocked school mourns mr. dean's death

DR. CLYDE SLOCUM: Boltwood School Principal

PHILLIP MCDEVITT: Beardsley School Principal

JAMES NELSON: Boltwood School Assistant Principal

RAYMOND ANDERSON: Beardsley School Assistant Principal

Beardsley school principal Philip McDevitt reaches for his pen to OK a senior's leave early permit.

Before school began in September, Dr. Clyde Slocum arranged a retreat which he, Dean of Students Mr. Allen Gablesen, Assistant Principal Mr. James Nelson, Counselor Mrs. Sue Baumann, class officers, and members of the student council attended, in an effort to create good relations between the administration and student leaders. Other social events were planned later in the year, including an evening out at Hackney's.

Principal Mr. Edward Curry planned to set up an attendance and student personnel office in Michael School instead of having grade level advisors. The office would handle transcripts, counseling, student activities, student government, parent conferences, health service, leave-early permits, and parking permits. Mr. Robert Trevarthen, Bacon principal, and Dr. Slocum dissolved the advisor system, while Mr. Philip McDevitt, Beardsley principal, retained his four advisors.

Mr. Curry was chosen by the West German government to be one of six US educators to participate in an educational exchange program.

Mr. McDevitt made this his last year at ETHS, as he planned to work for his doctorate at Northwestern University next fall.

On Saturday, March 6, Mr. Lester Dean suffered a fatal heart attack at the age of 50, having served as a counselor at ETHS in 1960 and as the assistant principal in Michael School since 1967. BPE Teacher Mr. David Keefe took charge of some administrative duties following Mr. Dean's death. The Lester Dean Memorial Fund was founded in his honor.

The Existentialism of Ragtime and Dixieland Jazz was a new, non-credit mini-course conceived and offered during the fourth quarter by Beardsley English Teacher Mr. John Stellwagen. Other mini-courses offered under the auspices of the Beardsley English Department were Computer Syntax, Creativity, and Film.

Examination of the Michael School 4 English Elective program prompted the Boltwood School English Department to plan a modified 1 semester version to be offered to Boltwood seniors next year. Students would be able to build their own English curriculum by choosing from a large variety of course offerings, including Shakespearean Tragedy, Philosophy, Creative Writing, and Hemingway. Beardsley School decided to begin this program the second marking period.

Modular scheduling allowed Boltwood School to schedule freshmen six mods per week in labs in addition to the lecture and seminar sessions. Lab sessions were aimed at meeting individual needs and interests through a variety of media presentations and research.

Field trips sponsored by the Boltwood School English Department encouraged students to explore the arts and their community. 2 English 2 students went to see The Great White Hope, and various groups visited Operation Breadbasket and the Ebony House.

4 english elective program inaugurated

Designed to give students a voice in determining those aspects of English considered most relevant, Michael School English Department substituted a different English course each quarter for the usual full-year English curriculum. The sequence of electives offered included the Message in the Media, Film as Art, Man and Woman, Youth in Contemporary Literature, the Comic Spirit, Heightened Imagination, and Theater of the Angry and the Absurd. One composition and one literature course were required. Students indicated their preferences for electives consisting of three 3-mod seminars taught by Mr. Ronald Markwell, Miss Karen Kuehner, or Mrs. Coralie Lang. Michael English Council was formed to evaluate the program, meeting weekly with representatives of each of the twelve courses offered. Plans were made for a school-wide assimilation of the program at the senior level by second semester.

Bacon School expanded its curriculum to include a larger selection of optional book titles. An English lab aiming toward personalized instruction was established for freshmen. Students were scheduled into the sessions two mods per week under teacher supervision.

Bacon purchased a movie camera for student use to encourage film-making as an independent-study project and instituted a program inviting guest speakers for large group lectures.

To aid in the mastery of economic concepts, the study of economics was incorporated in History of Civilization, U.S. History, Ideas of Western Man, and Studies in Social Science. More attention was given to economic concepts than to economic history.

Since major ideas, issues, and trends important to life today were emphasized in social studies courses, other social sciences, particularly history, political science, sociology, and psychology were included in many social studies courses.

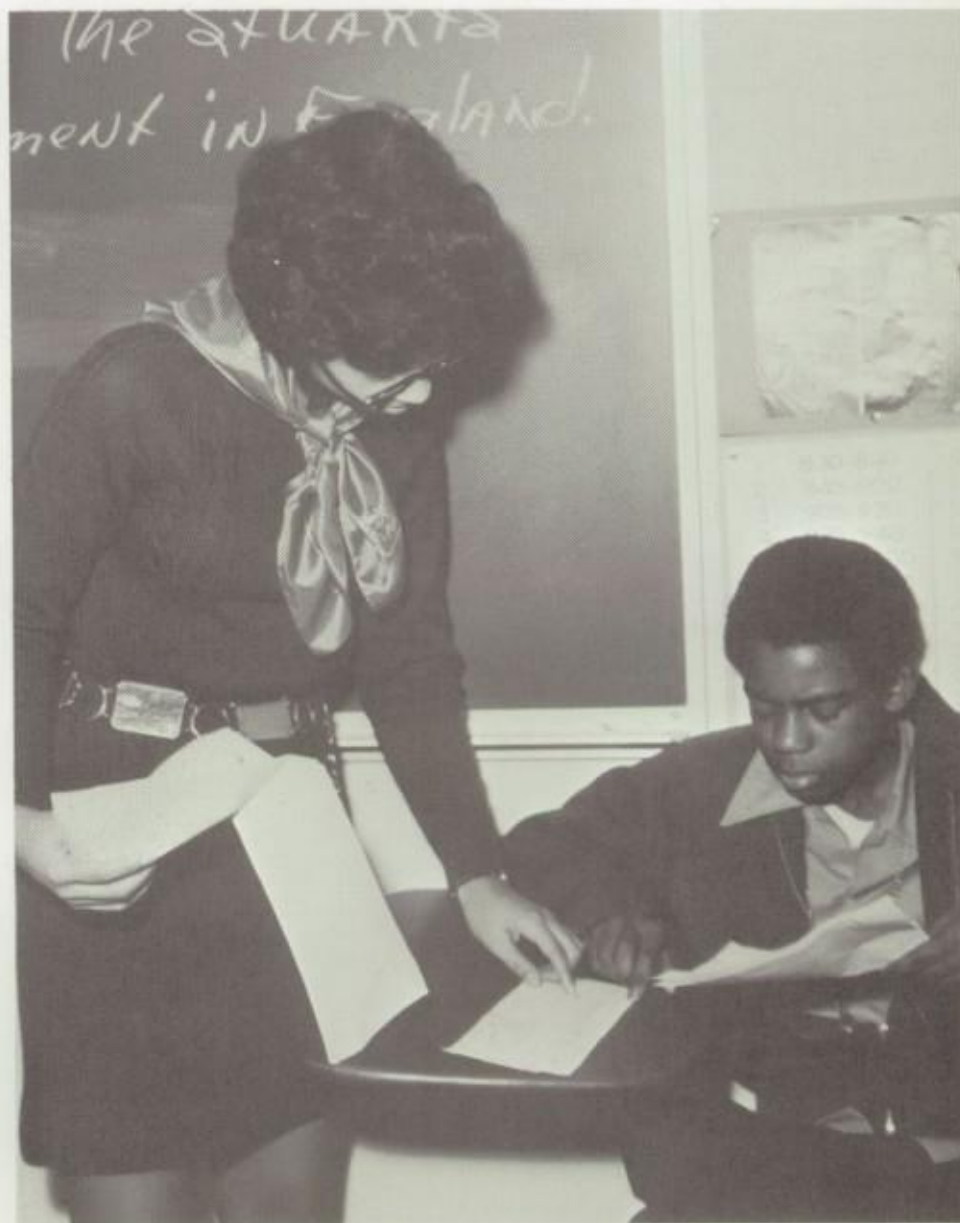

An effort was made to motivate freshmen and sophomores through an evaluation of courses offered to them, the length of classes, and the number of times a class met per week. Course revisions were planned to make course requirements less rigid and to offer a greater variety of social studies courses to students other than seniors.

Outside speakers, field trips, and the use of more audio-visual equipment encouraged greater independence in learning on the part of students.

A room was set aside in Beardsley Resource Center for use as a social studies lab in order to give students an informal setting in which to hold conferences, listen to tapes, view filmstrips or work on group projects. As a teacher was always available to help students, the lab also served as a tutorial center.

Political Science, open to juniors and seniors, was offered for the first time, and was divided into two semesters. Twentieth Century Russia, taught by Mrs. Patricia Peterson, was expanded to include more students.

Bacon Resource Center was used as a tutoring center, whereby each teacher was available to students a certain number of mods each week.

Michael School Social Studies Department opened up more independent study opportunities, with a course called Seminar On The Non-Western World. Juniors and seniors were eligible for the course and met with teachers at assigned periods to discuss papers and projects.

Bacon and Michael Social Studies Departments both worked closely with the other two schools in a project of evaluation. Four committees were formed to discuss ability grouping, scheduling, possibilities for enlarging curriculum and graduation requirements in order to make changes for the school year 1971-1972.

"Man and Nature," "Science and Technology," "Man's Inhumanity of Man," "The Process of Change," "Man's Search for Certainty and Moral and Ethical Values," comprised the study units of the completely revised freshman Combined Studies program. Students participated in the planning and evaluation of work within well-defined units of study by setting up objectives, leading class discussions, and developing individual reading and research programs.

To foster a feeling of togetherness, the Combined Studies Council, headed by Beardsley senior David Graham, organized a theater trip for CS students of all levels to see A Midsummer Night's Dream on April 4. Mrs. Heydemann's 4 English C classes studied the philosophy and practice of education while reading Summerhill, a novel about a school employing a radical approach to child rearing, by A.S. In response to an N.C.A. questionnaire in which 142 students responded that they would have taken a course called Chemistry for Nurses if it were offered, the Beardsley School Science Department developed a course entitled Techniques and Applications of Chemistry. The main goal of this course was to give a chemistry background to students interested in careers in nursing, medical technology, or lab technology. Another course, Senior Laboratory Training in Science, was implemented for students planning a technical career immediately after graduation.

Individualized student-teacher contracts were used on an experimental basis in some Boltwood science classes. This method of learning established certain requirements for specific grades and allowed students to work for the grade they desired. Improvement of study skills, including listening, reading, and writing was stressed in most contracts.

Innovation was exhibited in Boltwood Science Department as a new course, Field Ecology, was developed for the summer school curriculum. This three week, 1/2 credit course was designed to help students develop an appreciation of their environment and of the many interrelationships between man and nature. One-third of the term consisted of a field trip to Ely, Minnesota, where students would camp and canoe in Quetico Provincial Park which extends into Canada.

Designed to provide for the diversified requirements and abilities of students, the Beardsley and Bolt-wood mathematics programs offered a variety of specialized courses. Beardsley General Math teacher, Mr.
James Gregg, participated in a summer curriculum project, sponsored by the Illinois Institute of Technology and funded by the National Science Foundation. The project was directed toward the compilation of a series of workbooks with relevant slide presentations, real-life word problems, and home assignments. The new methods and procedures introduced allowed students to work independently at their own rate under teacher supervision.

Increased use of dial access as a required class activity supplemented the program in both schools.
Taped lessons covered fundamental processes in algebra and geometry.

Beardsley School established a Math Resource Study Area to aid and encourage teacher-student contact and the use of independent study materials, of which an increasing number of students took advantage.
The availability of teachers for consultation throughout the day provided students the opportunity to make Independent study courses in Probability and Trigonometry were offered for the first time in Michael School. Students met with an instructor twice a week, and received variable credit for these courses.

The Math Lab and calculators in Michael Resource Center were used by many students in order to solve many complex problems. The lab was open all day, enabling students to use it whenever they had free time.

The emphasis of Michael School's Math Program was on interaction between students. Conference rooms in the resource center were manned by students almost every mod during the day. In this way, if students were unable to contact their teachers they could bring their problems to other students.

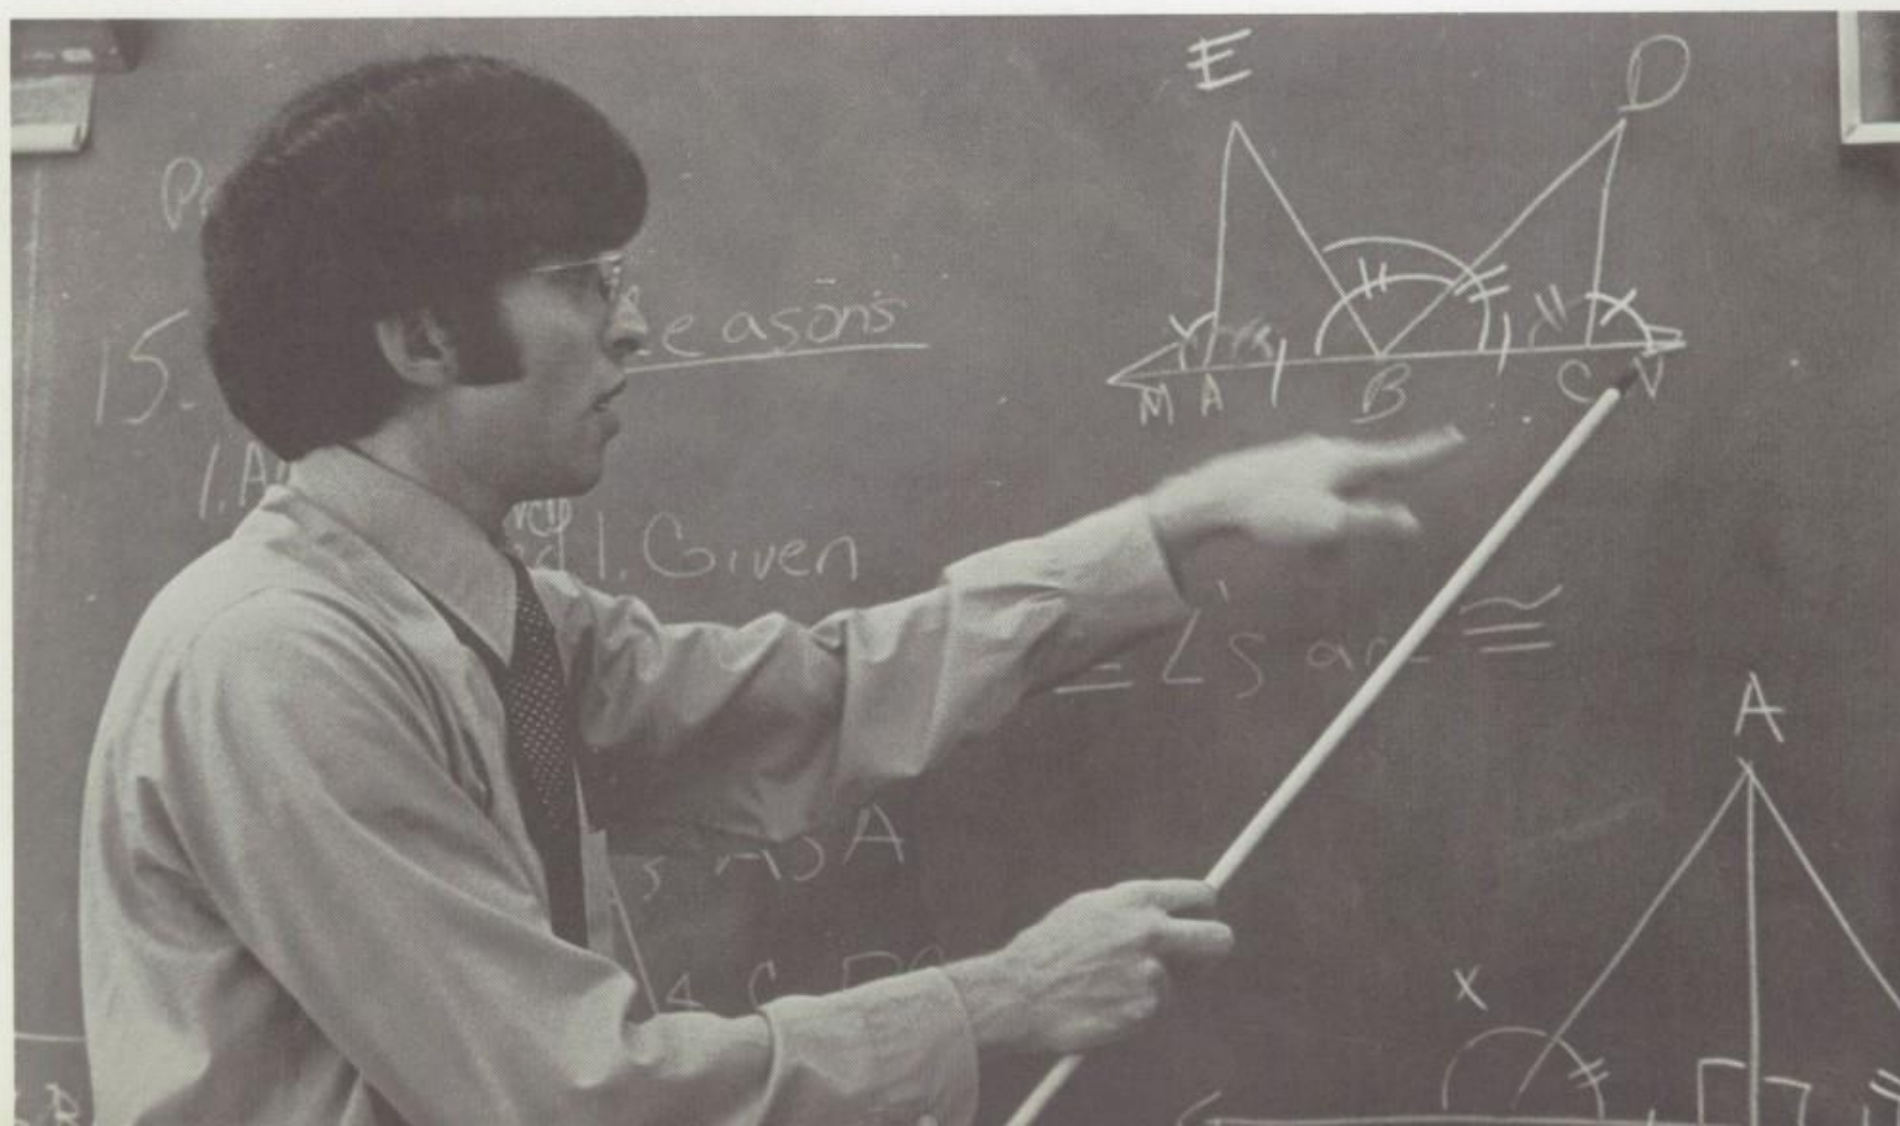

The Dial Access Data Retrieval System again proved to be a boon to the students in reviewing, and making up lessons they had missed. A student who had missed a class session could go to his school's resource center and dial a pre-recorded lecture from the tape deck in the Media Center.

Students receiving high grades on the Advanced Placement Exam were able to enter the college of their choice in second year math.

Additional media were used extensively to implement the math program. The use of the resource center was, again, encouraged. File drawers were used for distributing assignments and returning homework. Closed circuit television, video tapes, and other audiovisual materials were also utilized as teaching aids.

Bacon Mathematics Department planned to introduce courses in slide rule and a course called Introduction to Geometry. The latter course would be geared to the student who wished to complete two credits of math, but needed a simpler course than regular geometry. Bacon used 1970-71 as a year of evaluation, rather than as of a year of change, in order to better fit the needs of the students in the coming year.

For the first time, ETHS sponsored a trip to a foreign country during summer vacation. A seven-week trip to Israel was offered to interested students to familiarize them with Israeli life and to enable them to practice Hebrew. A trip to Paris during Spring vacation was also organized to allow students to familiarize themselves with the French culture and language.

A specific area in Beardsley Resource Center was designated as the Foreign Language section in which students utilized teacher and literary resources. A conference room containing a record player and tape recorder was available for Russian and German students who wished to practice their oral skills. Another conference room, decorated with posters of Israel, was used by Hebrew students who wished to practice Hebrew conversation.

Boltwood Foreign Language Department organized special classes for freshman students taking their second year of language instead of combining the freshman with sophomores and juniors who had already had a year of language study at ETHS.

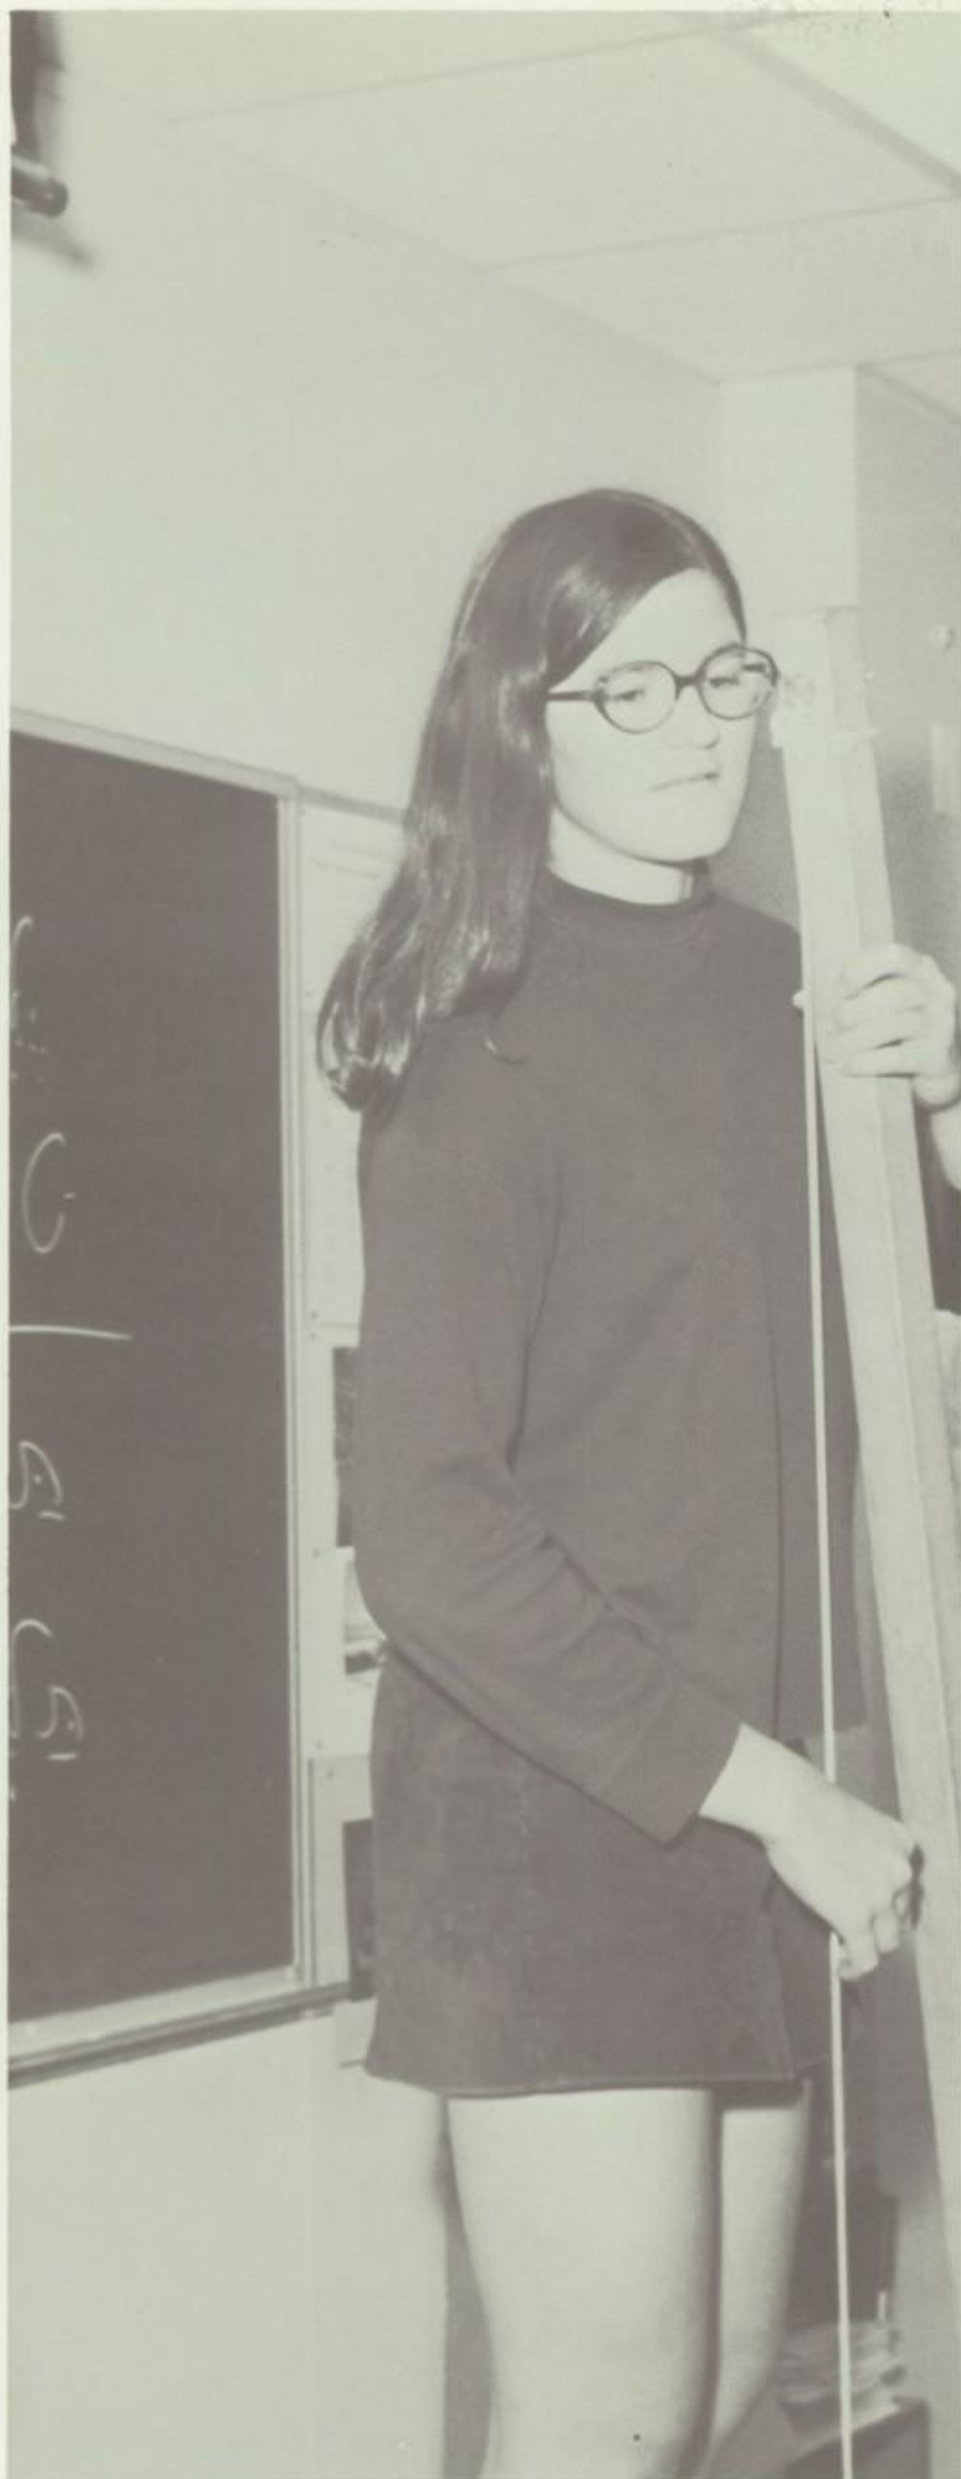

A Spanish lunch session organized by Miss Martha McNutt continued for its second year in Boltwood school and a Hebrew lunch session was started in Beardsley by Mr. Reading Dallal. Students brought their lunch to the Student Activities area of their school in order to practice conversation in an informal setting.

Michael School lost one of it's German teachers, Mrs. Michaela Lazar, to a part-time basis while she worked on an advanced degree at Northwestern University. Taking her place was Mr. Thomas Poole, formerly of Chicago Circle Campus.

Chairman of Bacon Foreign Language Department Mrs. Mary Colin replaced Mr. Albert Turner when Mr. Turner accepted a position at Glenbrook South High School.

As a result of student petitioning, five new Hebrew classes were instituted this year. Various tapes of the Hebrew lessons were made available to students in the language lab.

First and second year regular classes were scheduled to meet more mods each week, in order to give students more time with their language. Second year honors students were also granted longer periods of time in order to elaborate on wider aspects of language, including projects outside the realm of textbook materials.

Foreign Language tapes were used in the language lab for the second year to help accustom students to the sound of a foreign language. Audio cassettes were also used in the classroom. Mrs. Dorothy Bohnen, ETHS Art Consultant, was frequently requested by members of the Foreign Language Department to prepare slide lectures on topics ranging from the French Impressionists to the Gothic cathedrals of Europe.

The dream of becoming a director came true for those with stamina and desire. Self-directed projects were a new experience for everyone. In the theatre field, three one-act plays were directed by students; Ginger Anne, directed by Boltwood senior David Keneipp; Winners, directed by Boltwood senior Paul Walker; The Last Million-Miles, directed by Boltwood senior Larry DeLooze.

A new mini-course was created in the oral-interpretation field. Interpretation of Black Contemporary Writers, taught by Mr. William Leftwich, concentrated on the study of black writers of the twentieth century.

Television classes were renamed and reorganized. Television Fundamentals, the basis for further advancement in this progressive three-semester course of study, concentrated on the operation of television equipment. Utilizing all of the fundamentals learned in the first course, the student could advance to directing television programs. Television Direction and Media Research dealt in areas of original research and production.

Three field trips were planned by the Music Department to Orchestra Hall in Chicago, but only one became a reality. On December 4, students heard the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in a special student concert, as a part of the Symphony's continuing program of cultural enrichment.

Record players and books were moved out of Mrs. Betty Jacobson's room into the music office, consolidating these materials with the music scores there. Students could come to this Music Resource Center during their free mods.

Windows were installed in the doors of the practice rooms to prevent occupancy by more than one person at a time. The intercom system between the practice rooms and the music office, inoperative last year, was repaired.

In March, students at Nichols Junior High were given a sample of what they had to look forward to in music classes here, choosing from the freshman Glee Club, the four school chorales, the beginning instrument classes, cadet and concert bands, and the senior ETHS Choir.

In spite of the administration's decision to prohibit Christmas carolling in the halls, the ETHS Choir made several appearances outside the school. The group sang Christmas carols at the Evanston Historical Society in December. Protection of student art from vandals was a problem for the Art Department. In February, a student painting by Boltwood senior Steve Knitch was stolen from an art exhibit in the main corridor. Although it was recovered, art teachers were reluctant to display further student work.

Jewelry designed and created by Art Instructor Mr. Karsten Haugen was also taken from the showcase outside Michael Resource Center. The jewelry was worth between $300-$350 and was not recovered.

Insufficient student enrollment resulted in the discontinuance of the Film-Making course. A lack of funds and a subsequent lack of art materials curtailed many student projects and prevented many innovative techniques from being explored.

The portrait of Olive Baty Cunningham hanging next to the library, which had been removed for repairs, was restored and rehung. The restoration was done by Boltwood senior Yee-Gee Cheng. Cunningham, ETHS alumnus killed in action during World War I, was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism. His parents established the Olive Baty Cunningham memorial prize in his honor.

Scheduling conflicts in the Boys' Physical Education Department were reduced through a curriculum revision in which classes were offered at all levels throughout the day. Junior and senior boys were allowed to choose from aquatics, gymnastics, weight training, track, physical fitness, and team sports including football, soccer, basketball, and baseball. Individual skills were developed through archery, tennis, badminton, and dance.

Students of above-average ability assisted in intramural activities, organizing teams for sports competition within the four schools. Mr. Robert Hurst served as temporary director of intramural sports until January, while former coach, Richard Legue, completed military duty.

Adaptive classes were available to those students whose activities were restricted upon physicians' requests, enabling them to fulfill their graduation requirements. A mandatory health education course stressing the mental and emotional aspects as well as the physical aspects of health was offered to sophomores in addition to their BPE activities. Personal and family problems, environmental health, and dangerous depressants and stimulants were among the topics discussed. Thirty-two boys participated in Boys' Leaders, a course designed to permit students to direct and set up the policies of the intramural program.

Under the auspices of the newly instituted Choice Program, juniors and seniors were given the freedom to select their own Physical Education course of study. Students chose the activity which they wanted to pursue in each of the six six-week units. All classes consisted of heterogeneously grouped juniors and seniors, although seniors were given preference in their selections.

The flexibility of the Choice program made possible two additions to the curriculum, fencing and lifesaving. Lifesaving, previously offered only on an extra-curricular basis, gave students the opportunity to obtain certification from the American National Red Cross as junior or senior lifesavers.

Freshmen and sophomores continued exploration into the broader, introductory Core Program. This program gave the girls experience in the areas of fencing, field sports, tennis, badminton, volleyball, basketball, swimming, gymnastics, modern dance, and archery enabling them to make more meaningful choices when they are eligible to participate in the Choice Program.

In addition to the tennis team, the badminton team, and other interscholastic activities, a special volleyball team was organized which participated in the Sports Day activities.

home ec offers new faculty dining area

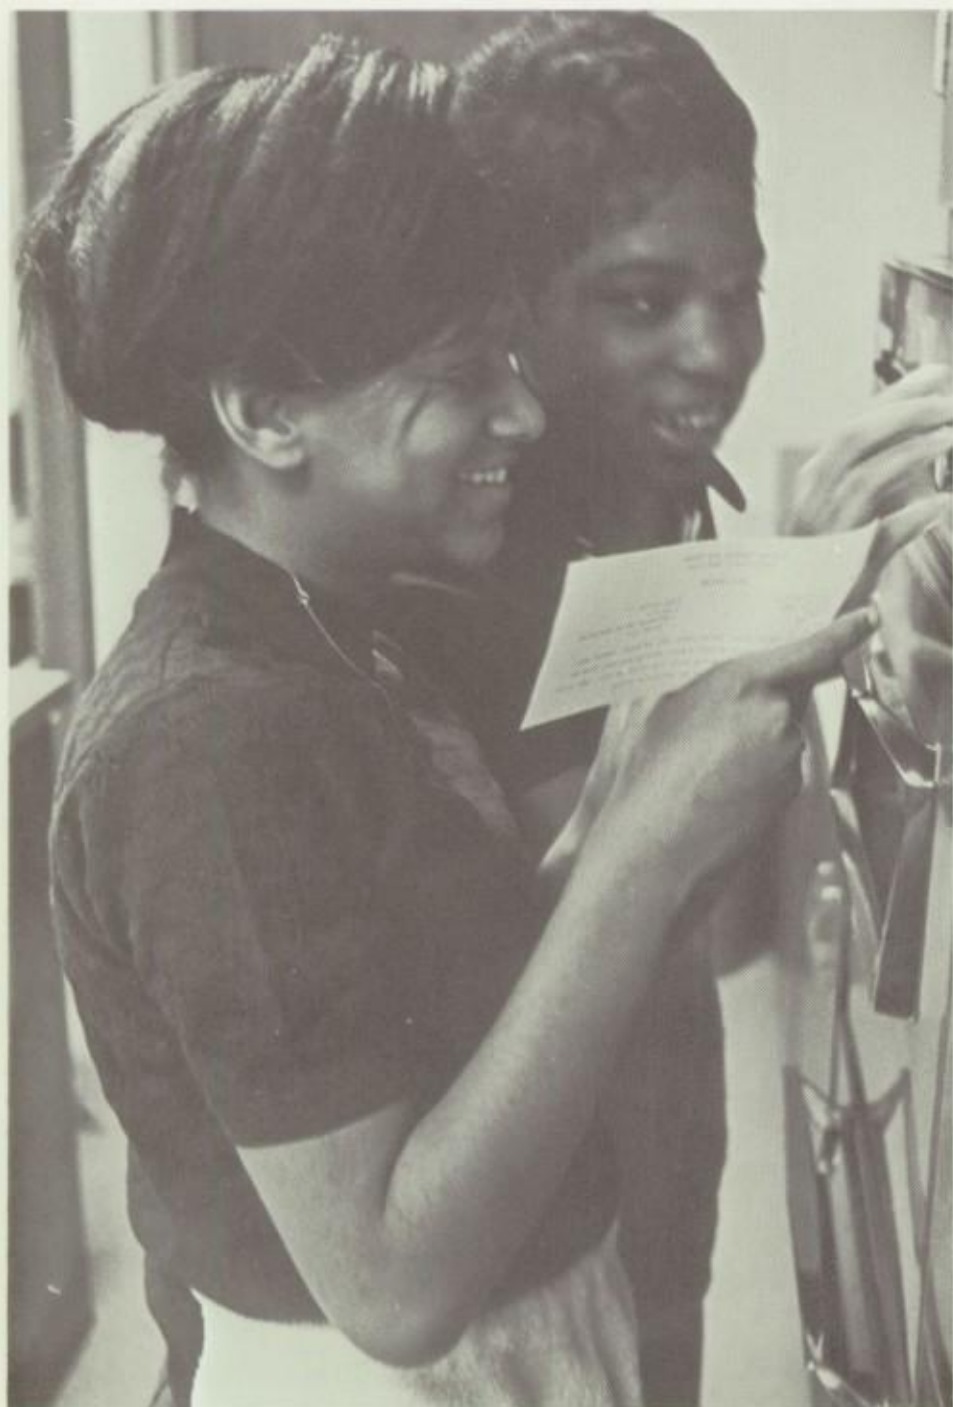

Students interested in food service were able to participate in the new Home Economics Occupation course which was added to the curriculum. In this course, students learned to prepare food "by doing." Once a week, meals were served to staff members in a dining room setting for a small fee. The profit from these luncheons was used to finance field trips to restaurants and other places where the student could learn about food production.

More boys joined the Home Economics department in Family, Foods, Home Decorating, and Child Development courses. Students in the Child Development course branched out into the community to work with children in Project Head Start.

A court located outside the Home Economics Department was designed for the nursery-school children at ETHS. The plans included a garden with many types of plants of various colors and textures and an "adventure playground." Plans were begun in the fall to construct the court in a natural setting as a "welcoming place for children to play."

Electricity-Electronics and Metals expanded this year to six separate courses in each area. illinois law requires course in consumer ed

Foresight characterized the attitude of the Business Education Department this year. In preparation for the Illinois State Law, effective beginning with the class of 1973, which prescribes that all students be required to pass a course or its equivalent in consumer education, the Business Education Department outlined three proposals. Text materials on money management would be available in each of the four resource centers. Students would be given the option of studying this material and taking the state exam without other course preparation or of taking either a semester course or a summer school course in consumer education.

Nearly 300 students were involved in a combination of classroom and on-the-job experience. Most of the students enrolled in work-study programs worked approximately 20 hours a week and spent the remainder of the time attending class.

Distributive Education coordinated classroom study with on-the-job training in approved local businesses in the fields of marketing and distribution. Students worked for a retailer, usually in a sales capacity, and DE coordinators kept in constant contact with the student's supervisor. Both the ETHS teacher and the supervisor planned a step-by-step training program for the student, in which responsibilities gradually increased in accordance with the student's ability.

In Distributive Occupations, juniors and seniors received similar training with related classroom study. This training, however, was given in industrial or grade areas.

Students enrolled in Office Occupations spent classroom time perfecting office skills and procedures in preparation for outside employment in clerical and stenographic capacities.

Vocational Experience, which had the highest enrollment of all work-study programs involved 126 students. During class time students learned methods of interviewing, getting along with people, and handling personal finance. Many different types of jobs were made available to students, ranging from clerks to laboratory assistants. Emphasis was placed upon attempting to match a student's interest and aptitude with the jobs that were available.

students produce driver ed video series

Mr. Guenther finds that radios eliminate many of the difficulties of directing traffic on the Driver Ed. range.

"It's the Law", a video tape series produced by a panel of students under the direction of Driver Education instructors, Mr. Richard Boyer and Mr. Michael Miles, was incorporated into the '71 program. Students viewed a taped interview of Mr. Robert Chriss, Evanston Police Department—Youth Division, participating in a discussion concerning the fundamental points of the law in relation to the driving experience.

Approximately 1,000 students elected summer school and one-semester courses satisfying Illinois State requirements. Driver Education Classroom was no longer compulsory for ETHS graduation.

A four-phase curriculum consisting of classroom seminars, simulation laboratory, multiple-car, off-street driving range, and actual in-traffic experience comprised the course. Driving techniques were stressed through films and simulator practice; vehicle control, driver responsibility, and practical driving skills were emphasized.

At a Demonstration Center program at the Hyatt House O'Hare, one of the delegates interrupts ETHS' presentation and entreats the audience to fill out a questionnaire.

Visitors from all over the world came to ETHS to learn about the curriculum, modular scheduling, and to examine the means by which a large school copes with its problems. Student guides were recruited by the Visitors' Bureau to conduct tours of the school.

Parents and Evanston residents participated in "See Your High School Day" on December 3 during which they observed students going about their regular school-day routine and were given a tour of the physical facilities of the school.

Members of the NCA (North Central Association) visited ETHS from November 17 through 19 to examine all facets of the programs and facilities available in order to evaluate the school and offer suggestions for improvement. The ETHS visiting team was made up of 48 educators from Illinois and eight other states.

Special programs for visitors interested in the fine arts were organized by the Demonstration Center. Students talented in the visual arts, music, drama, and dance performed for visiting educators from other schools to better acquaint them with ETHS programs in the arts. ETHS cooperated with four other north suburban schools to provide consultation, demonstration, and training for schools involved in the Illinois gifted student program.

card catalogue recast as computer print-out

Mechanization enabled the ETHS library to remain a complete, organized, and up-to-date source of information to students. Librarians relied on the help of computers to print out a current list of all books, filmstrips, and motion pictures available since February, 1970 in the main library, each of the four resource centers, and the Music Resource Center. This list, indexed by title, author, and subject matter, was published in bound volumes and made available to the students during the day as well as for use overnight, including information on subject material, circulating materials, and resource location. This portable catalogue enabled teachers to plan their curriculum around available resource materials and to aid students in preparing bibliographies at home.

In addition to filmstrip and motion picture equipment, dial-access systems, and microfilm viewers, the ETHS library added a set of tapes in cassette form and a tape duplicator to its multimedia resources. Over fifty tapes, made available by NBC and NET, were placed in each resource center for use during school hours. Additional copies of individual cassettes could be made in the main library by a duplicating machine for about $1.47 apiece.

beardsley talking-study offers student refuge

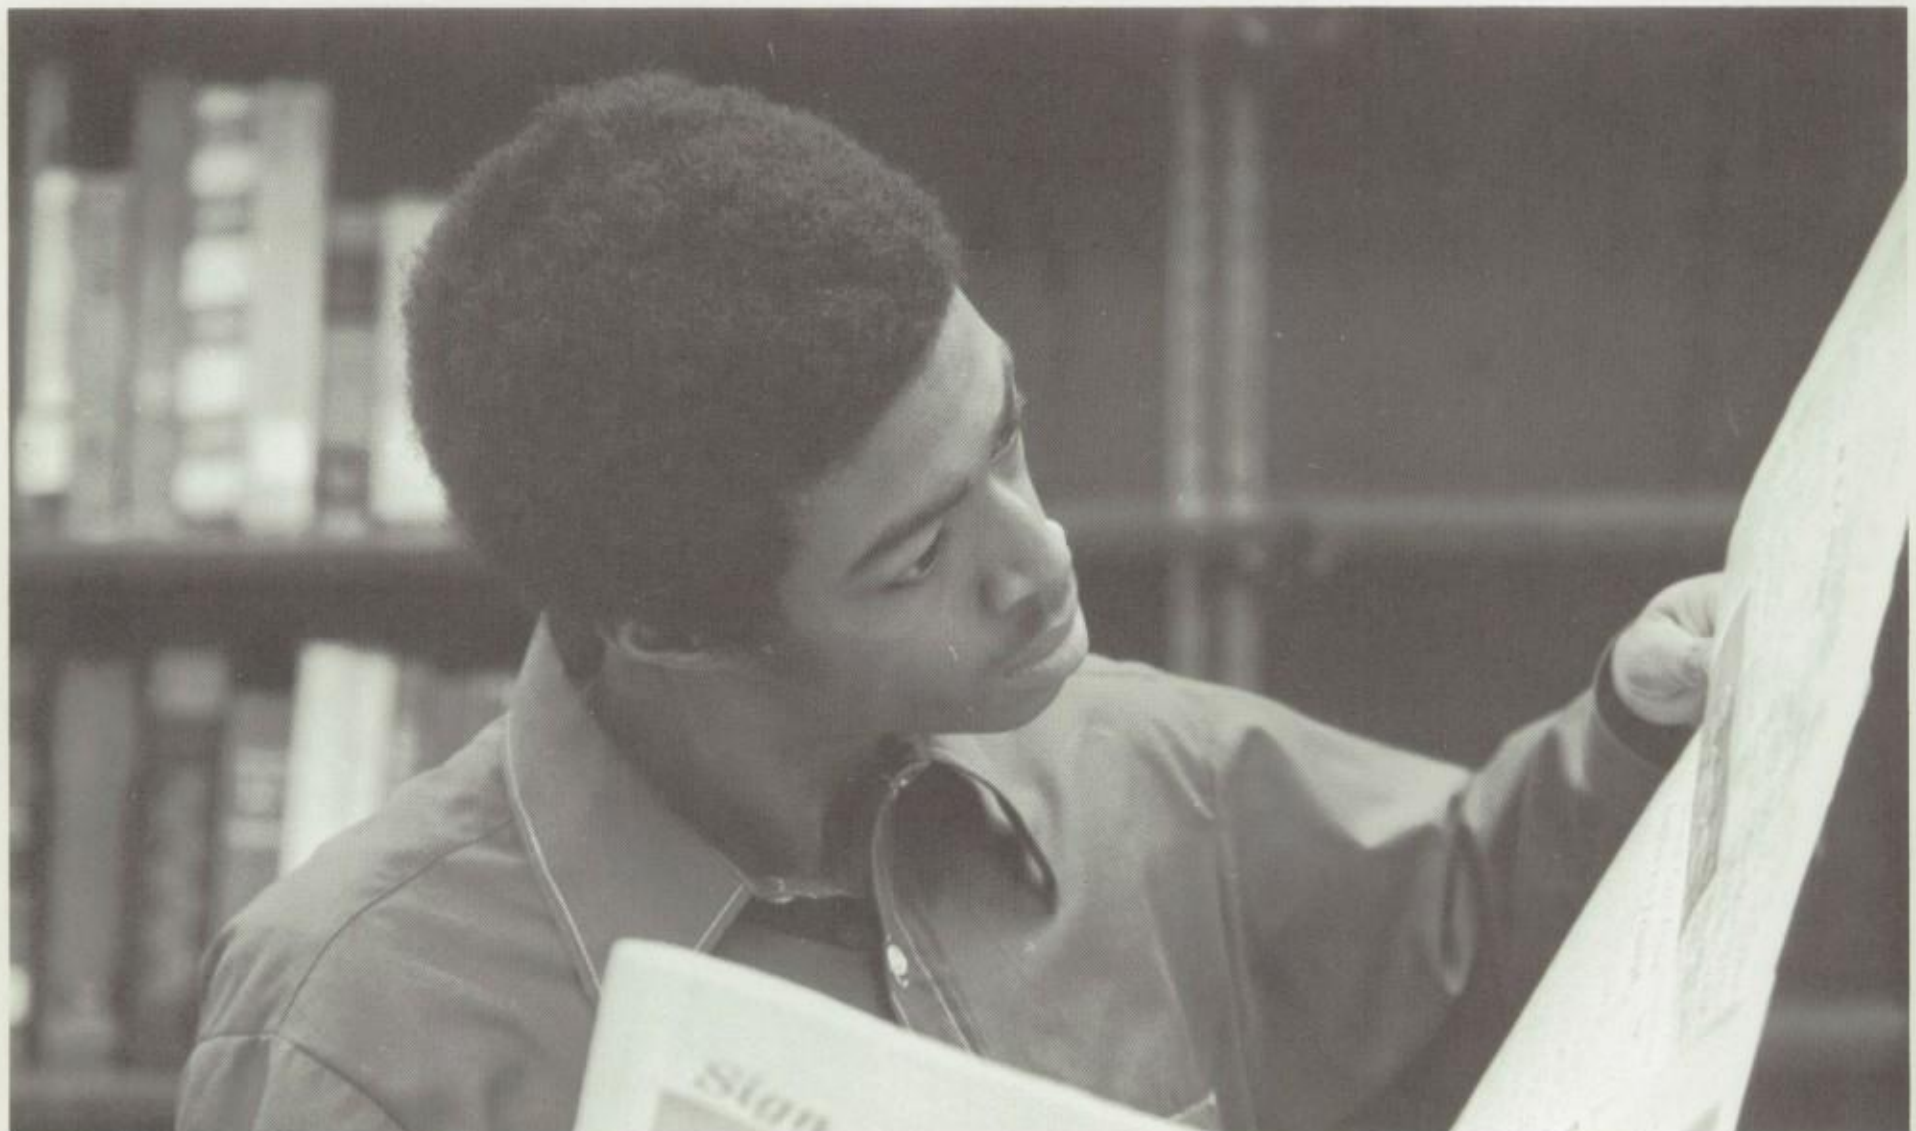

Jennie Berkson casually disregards Michael Resource Center's quiet study rule and gossips with a friend.

Resource Centers in Beardsley, Michael, Boltwood, and Bacon Schools served as refuges for homework and quiet study. Beardsley Resource Center reorganized its study locations and designated labs for Social Studies, Math, English, and Foreign Language. An additional room was set aside as a talking study where students could discuss assignments and exchange ideas.

Michael Resource Center established a Teacher Planning Center where departmental team meetings were held and professional materials provided.

Boltwood's Dial Access video programs were expanded to cover a wider variety of subject areas. Supplementary resource media included newspapers, magazines, pamphlets, and closed-circuit television. Study carrels were available for individualized study, and teacher workrooms were utilized in the preparation of dittoes and assignments. A large collection of resource and reference materials, conference rooms for group discussions, file cabinets, and audio-visual equipment were also supplied.

UEL TURSE.

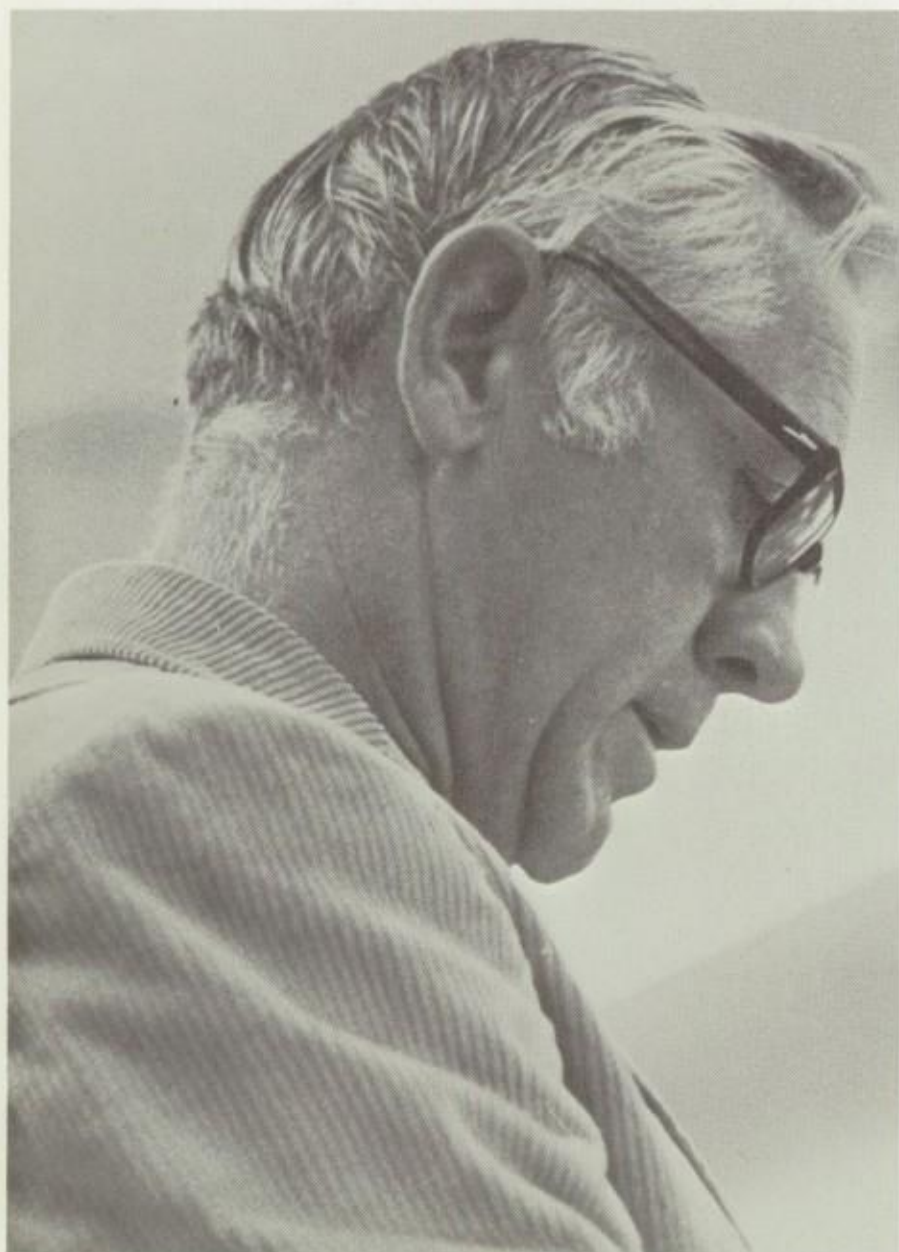

Bobbing for apples, carving pumpkins, and taking introductory school tours characterized Boltwood School's personalized freshmen introduction to ETHS. Throughout the first quarter, freshmen met with their counselors once a week in seminar groups to familiarize themselves with ETHS and to establish a personal rapport and a functioning communication channel between the students and the administration.

Boltwood upperclassmen met with their counselors during regularly scheduled assembly periods or in smaller counseling groups as the need arose. With their counselors, students discussed such issues as the possibility of an open campus, the introduction of more pass-fail courses into the curriculum, and the advisability of graduating in three years.

Beardsley School students met with their counselors at various times throughout the year during regularly assigned assembly periods. To discuss college and career opportunities, Beardsley School counselors found the early morning registration periods to be another effective communication channel.

Once each month, students were invited to take the General Aptitude Battery Test. The results from this test helped them to evaluate their talents and abilities in regard to a vocation or career choice.

The Handbook of Career and College Information, concerning application procedures and testing programs and a list of career opportunities for non-college-bound students, was made available for students planning for post high school commitments. This booklet was distributed to all seniors.

Michael School freshmen relinquished many of their free mods for assigned study hall periods during the day. This practice was instituted by Michael counselors as they felt that last year's freshmen misused their free time.

Bacon School abstained from this policy as many freshmen were unable to be scheduled for study time due to overlapping classes. Counselors also felt that there was a greater need to set time aside for student-teacher contact.

Another unique feature of Bacon Counseling comprised the formation of counselor groups of ten students each. These groups enabled students to share their experiences and air common problems. Each counselor supervised several groups. Students were selected either by parent, teacher, counselor, or self-recommendations. Sessions met once each week for different periods of time throughout the year. This system originated under the guidance of Bacon School Counselor Mr. Sanford Horn.

A college and university information center was opened in Bacon Counseling Office. College pamphlets, guides, and catalogues were made available in this room to juniors and seniors needing assistance in their college planning.

Offering a comprehensive educational program, the Special Services Department extended itself to include handicapped students having problems interfering with their optimal use of school facilities. Teachers and student aides worked with students deficient in reading and math skills, helping them to acquire competence in money management, measurements, and basic mathematical operations. Materials were adapted to various ability levels, and social as well as academic development was stressed in the job-orientated program.

Speech clinicians offered remedial services to students requiring speech correction in language fluency, voice quality, and articulation.

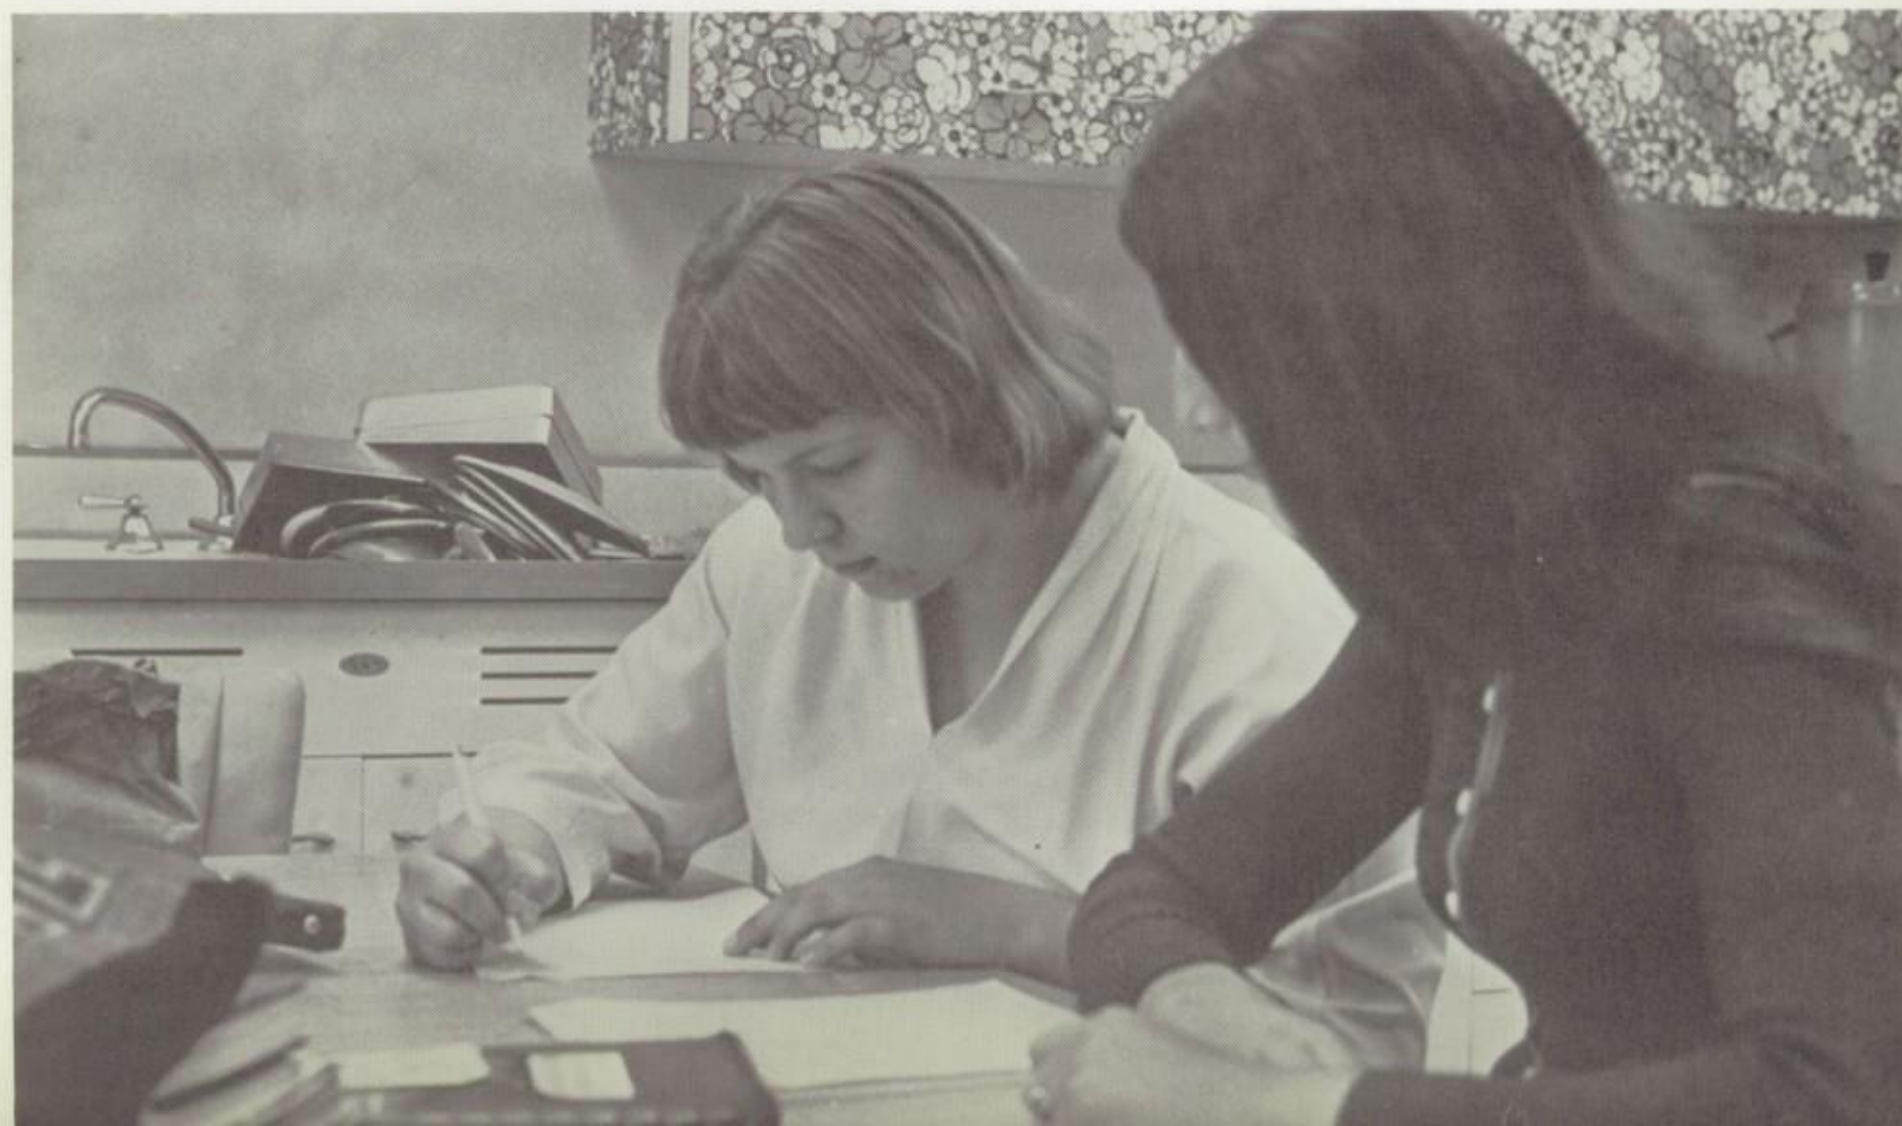

Home and hospital instructors provided educational experiences for students confined due to temporary or permanent physical handicaps, seeing to their physical, social, vocational, and academic needs. Tutors maintained contact with classroom activities and visited students a minimum of one hour per day.

Counseling for emotionally or socially maladjusted students was available through the efforts of a psychologist and school social-case workers. Problems were diagnosed, and recommendations were made for the mitigation of these problems.

A financial grant totaling $2,153.04 was donated by the North Shore Association for special extra-curricular activities involving these students and for furthering the program for orthopedically handicapped.

In addition to the many new materials introduced for the EMH student, and those handicapped by aural, visual, oral, or learning difficulties, the full-time school psychologist continued to assist students needing educational or personal guidance.

Located in Bacon, the Lab School came into existence this year as a supplement to regular school. Sixty sophomores, described as underachieving and/or unmotivated students with high ability levels, participated in its operation.

Attempting to interest students in learning through special programs designed to make school more relevant, stimulating, and up-to-date, a wide variety of classes ranging from lagoon ecology and mortuary science to law and computer programming was offered.

Students were educated in an unrestricted, informal atmosphere geared toward involvement. The option of choosing between the conventional letter grade and pass-fail systems was granted.

faculty members vaccinated against flu

Advocating the policy "Health is more than the absence of sickness or injury," Health Service co-operated with the guidance office this year, providing written health histories before a student was psychologically evaluated.

A record-keeping system was employed which aided in the early detection of health problems exhibited by students, enabled nurses to notify parents of antiquated health data, and permitted students requiring specific modifications in their activity programs to elect Adaptive Physical Education in place of the regular Physical Education course.

In order to provide students with comprehensive care, the nurses tried to keep a communication line open with community physicians, dentists, and families of ETHS pupils. Students with physical or emotional limitations received special attention.

Flu vaccines were offered to faculty members twice during the year. School nurses also guided teachers in the preparation of their Health Education classes.

Health Careers Club, formed last year by the nurses, guided students interested in pursuing a job in nursing, social work, and various other health careers. Weight reduction groups were also organized by Health Service for students recommended by their physical education teachers.

Seventy students participated in Health Careers Day on October 15 in the Little Theater to stimulate interest in health careers. Slides were shown, discussions held, and the representative of the Health Careers Council of Chicago spoke with students and answered questions.

abner's "yokumberry tonic" saves dogpatch

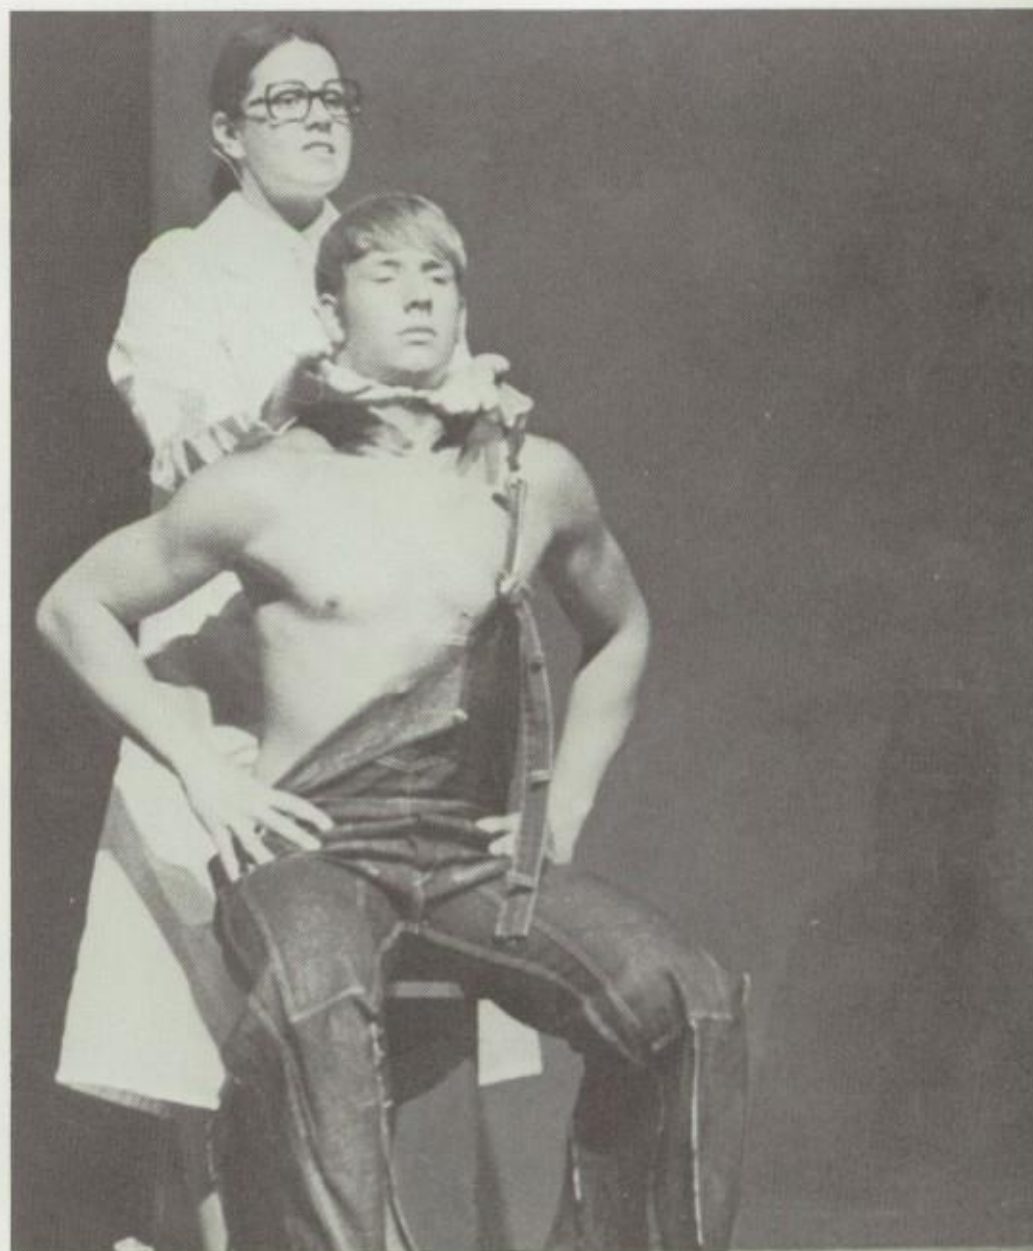

Left alone, Daisy May played by Nancy Didriksen wishfully sings of her "Druthers."

Lightness and comedy highlighted the 1970 production of the Summer Music Theatre Workshop. On July 24 and 25, students culminated six weeks of vocal, instrumental, and acting rehearsals with Li'l Abner, a musical based on the characters in the comic strip by Al Capp.

When Dogpatch, USA, the hometown of Abner Yokum, played by Bob McCormack and Wes Meyers, was planned to be used for nuclear testing, the citizens searched madly for a solution.

"Yokumberry Tonic," the medicine that Abner's mother, portrayed by Sue Monasch, had given her son for years which had made him strong, was found to turn scrawny men into strong, handsome men who were totally uninterested in romance. This predicament left Daisy Mae, played by Nancy Didriksen and Kerry McCarthy, trying to get Abner to marry her with no success in sight. Abner brought the drug to Washington to be tested and became mixed up with General Bullmoose, portrayed by Karroll Alexander, who tried futilely through sabotage to get Abner's money. The play ended on a happy note, however, with General Bullmoose exposed, Dogpatch saved, and Abner "romanticized" to finally marry Daisy.

"What a Wonderful World This Could Be!" set the pace for Homecoming activities this year on October 8, 9, and 10. The traditional schedule of events was altered in observance of the Jewish New Year Celebration, Yom Kippur.

Festivities for 1970 were planned and organized by the Cross-Four Committee. For the first time, floats were entered under two classifications in the hope that smaller clubs would participate. Class A included trailer floats and Class B decorated cars. First and second place awards were given in each category, with a third place awarded in Class A. Boltwood Seniors and the Bacon School Girls' Club took firsts in float competition. Bacon Seniors and the Office Occupations Club were awarded second place, and Michael Seniors finished third.

Announcements were made at the pep rally, Thursday, in Beardsley Gym. The crowning of Homecoming Queen Linda Jean-Paul, Boltwood School Senior and cheerleader, climaxed the rally. Bonnie Ableman, Beardsley School; Jill Karwales, Michael School; and Penny Summers, Bacon School; were named to her court. A parade through the downtown Evanston vicinity followed the presentations, featuring the Queen, her attendants, and the floats.

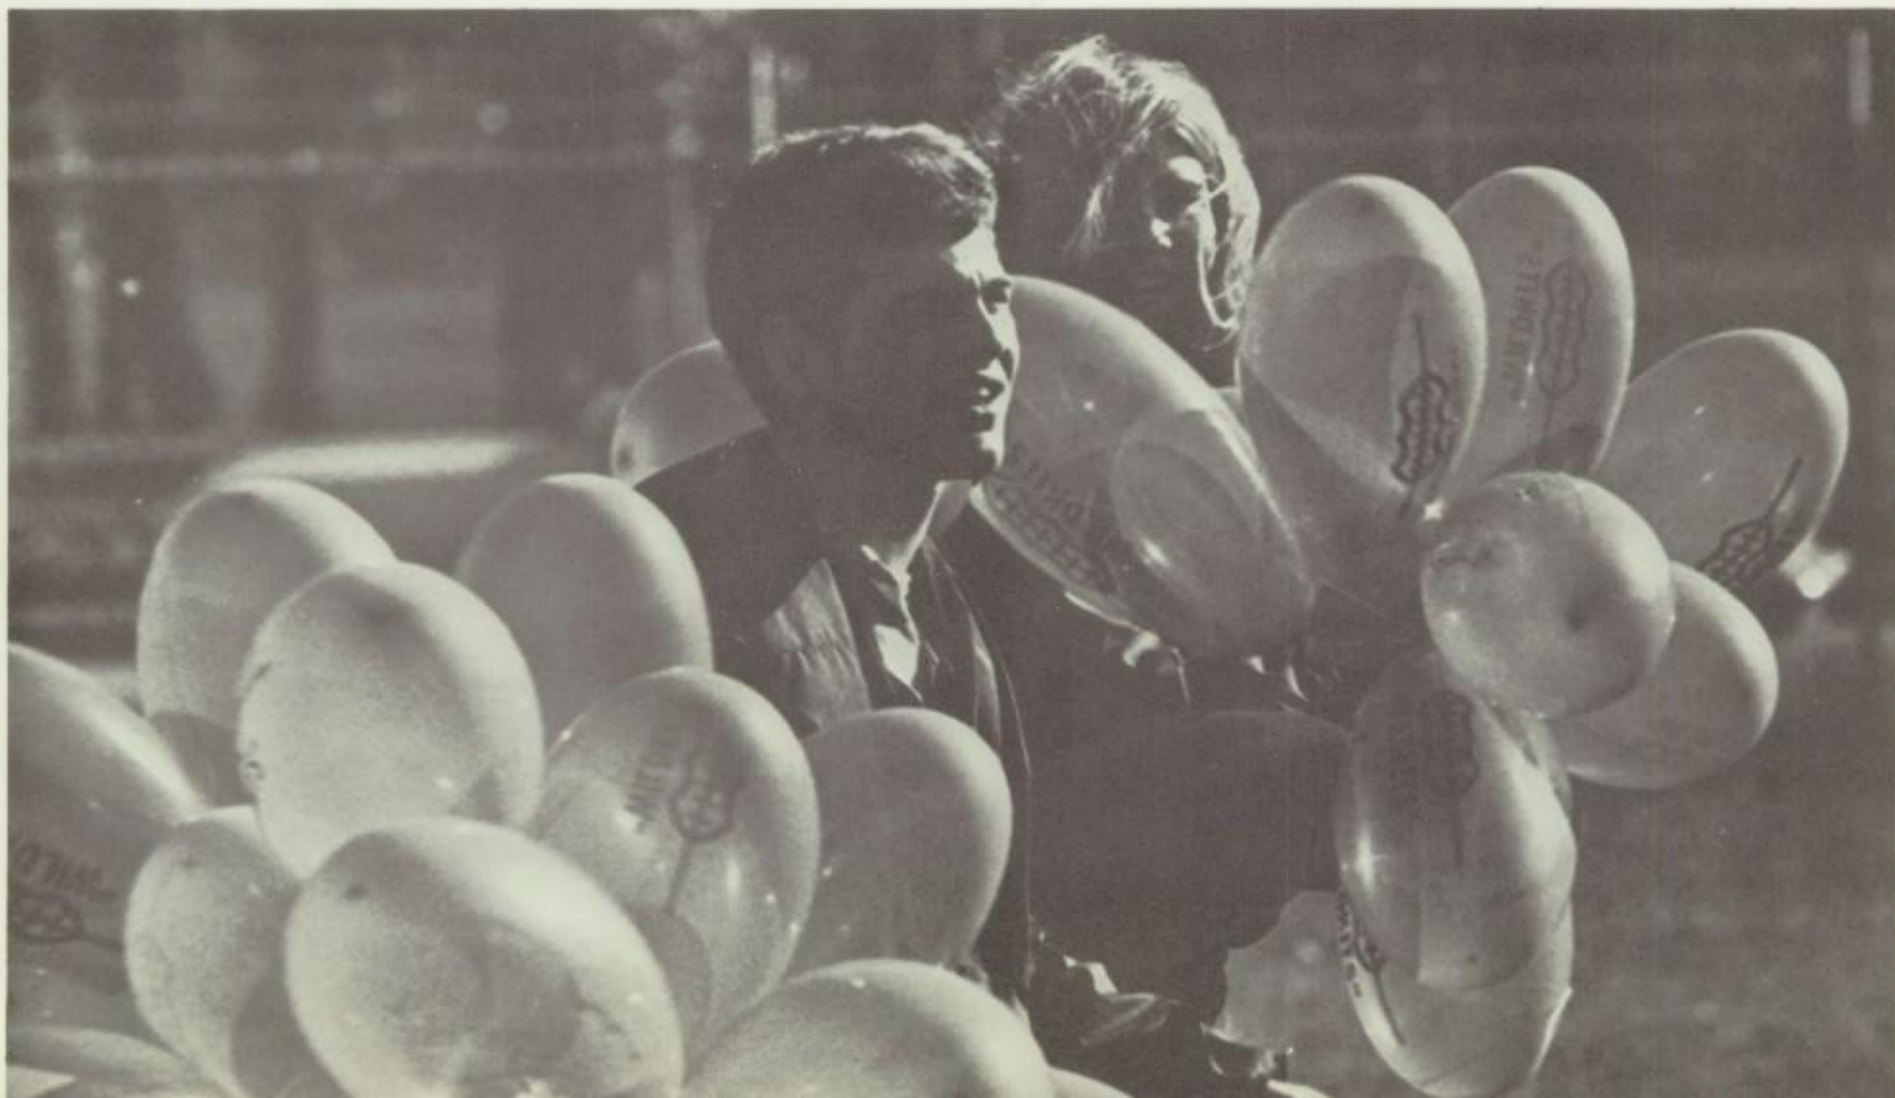

The Wildkits met the Proviso East Pirates Friday afternoon for the Homecoming game, crushing their opposition with a score of 41-6. Meanwhile, Evanston's soccer team maneuvered themselves into a 2-1 win over the New Trier East Indians.

Saturday evening, students celebrated ETHS victories and concluded the weekend's activities at the Homecoming dance, held in the Levy Center on Maple Avenue. Entertainment was provided by the Sound-Investment.

untitled yamo bows to four standing ovations

Women's liberation, violence in westerns, "Bozo's Circus," "The Lawrence Welk Show," the King Family, and the family doctor were among the objects satirized by YAMO '70, presented October 16, 17, 23, and 24 in the auditorium. Over 250 students wrote the script and music, designed and built the sets, choreographed the dance numbers, and performed in the show. More than half of the cast was new to YAMO.

Unlike last year's production, no title was given to YAMO '70, as the YAMO Board felt that it was unnecessary and that earlier titles had had little to do with the show.

Two useful additions were made in the area of set construction. An eight-foot extension was added to the main stage and placed over the orchestra pit in order to bring the action closer to the audience and to give the singers' voices a chance to carry over the large orchestra. A small revolving stage was also added to the right side of the main stage.

Following the final oratorio, a dramatic musical work without stage action, the cast took curtain calls to standing ovations each of the four nights.

frisch's firebugs blaze dramatic trails

After the destruction of Biedermann's town, Willy Eisenring, David Keneipp, becomes the Bishop of the Devil in Hell.

Clipboard and pen in hand, Katy Dexter as the Ph.D. checks the victim's souls into Hell.

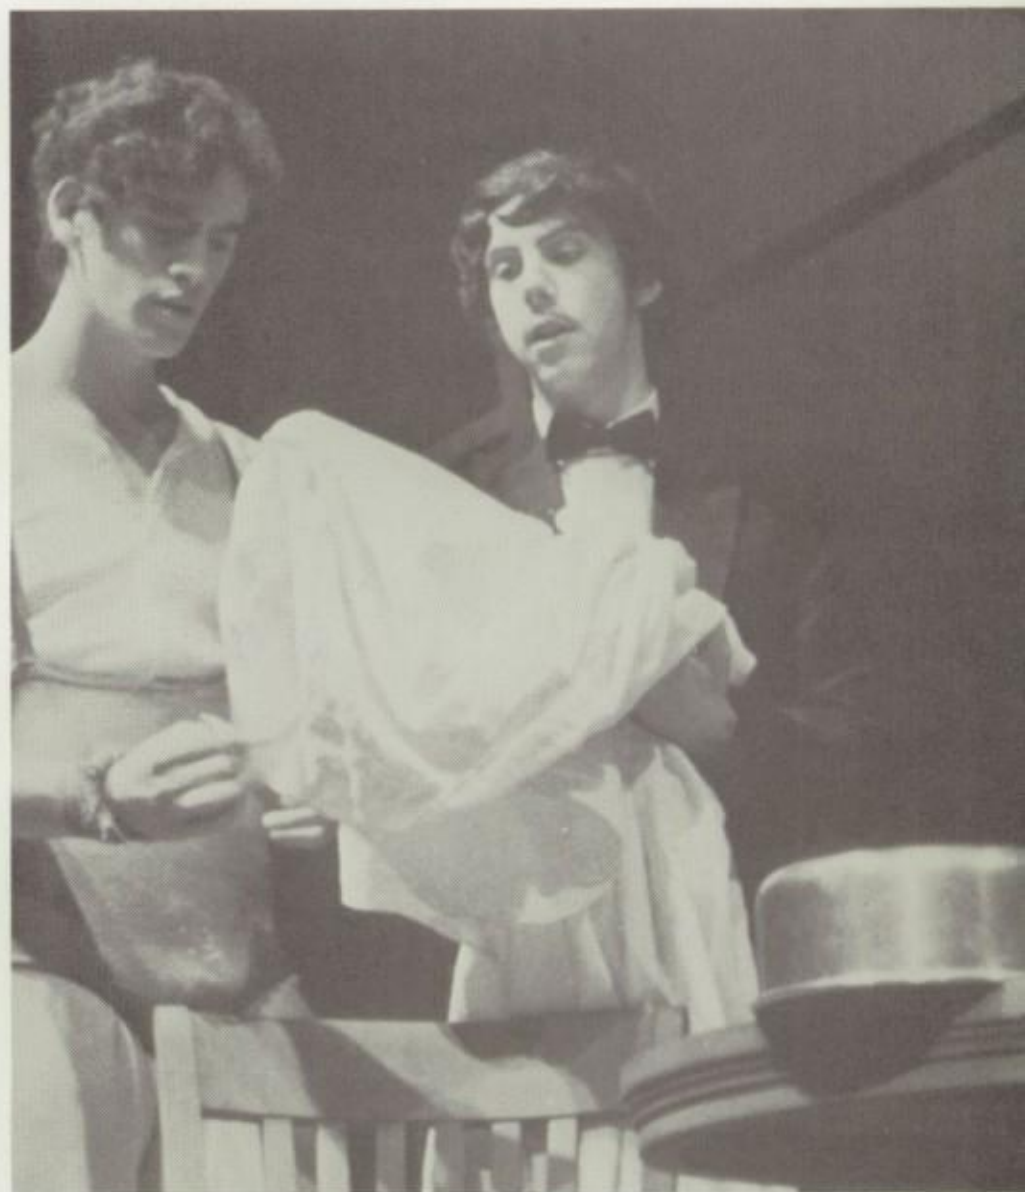

What would you the average citizen do if an institution faced destruction? Herr Biedermann struggled with this question in Biedermann and the Firebugs by the German playwright Max Frisch presented in the ETHS auditorium on November 20 and 21. Frisch himself referred to the play as a "learning play without a lesson."

Director Christine Friedrich broke precedent this year by casting many unknowns in order to bring fresh faces to the ETHS stage.

Robert Ozete, portraying Herr Biedermann a middle-aged businessman, lent his attic to Sepp Schmidt, a wrestler played by Bob Pincus, and Willy Eisenring, a waiter portrayed by David Keneipp, who sought shelter. Soon these two began collecting flammable materials and he was forced to wonder whether there was a connection between his boarders and a recent rash of neighborhood arsons. He refused to accept the threat of damage to himself or to his property. Inevitably, the signs of destruction became so apparent that Biedermann decided to yield to the Firebugs. Consequently, Biedermann's house was burned down with him inside. In the final scene he was sentenced to hell.

Willy Eisenring, the waiter, summed up the theme of the play when he said, "Truth is the best camouflage-nobody ever believes it."

CHRISTMAS

junior high boy offers crutch and is cured

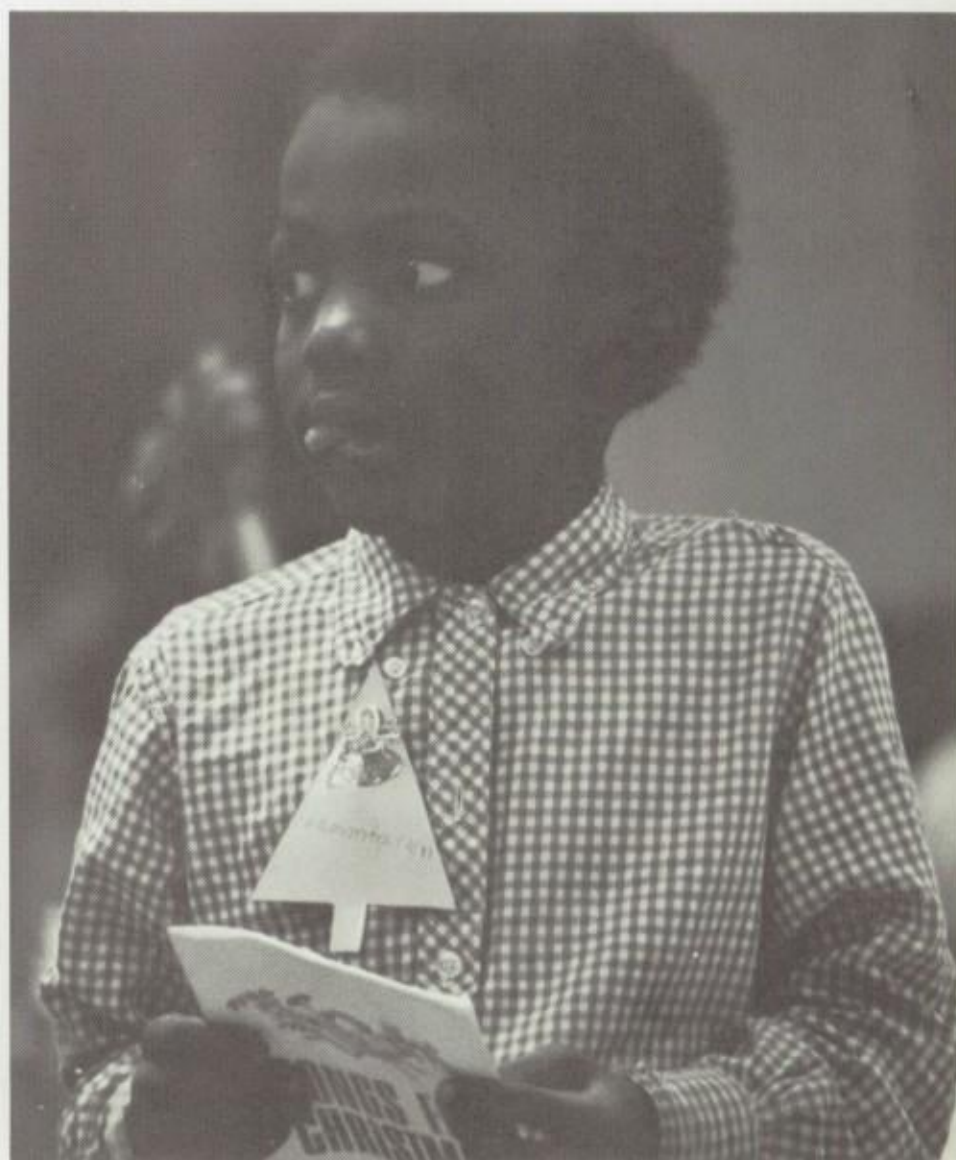

The Christmas spirit is evident as students surround and gaze at the ornamented tree in the main lobby.

Gian Carlo Menotti's opera, Amahl and the Night Visitors, performed twice on Sunday, December 13 in the ETHS auditorium, climaxed a weekend of Christmas music programs. Junior high school students, Cary Rasof of Skiles and Dale Daugherty of Nichols, double cast in the role of Amahl, joined the ETHS Choir in re-enacting the tale of a poor crippled boy and his mother who met the Three Kings on their way to Bethlehem to worship the newborn King. Envious of their riches, the Mother attempted to steal the wealth of the Kings, but was caught, and she repented. When Amahl offered his crutch, his most valuable possession, as a gift to the Child, he was miraculously cured of his lameness and followed the Kings to Bethlehem to give thanks to the Christ Child.

An ETHS tradition was broken this year when the senior choir was not permitted to sing carols in the hall as teachers complained last year that it disturbed their classes. Instead, Girls' Choir and the ETHS Choir caroled before school in the main lobby the two days preceding vacation.

Beardsley Action Group hosted a Christmas party for a group of thirty children between the ages of seven and fourteen from the Angel Guardian Orphanage on December 14 from 3:30-5:00. A scavenger hunt and an informal Folk Club Concert was held, and refreshments were provided.

CHORALE CONCERT

technicolor dreamcoat paints modern genesis

Mike Tabor, a member of the chamber orchestra, accompanies Roberta Fischer during her solo in Vivaldi's "Gloria."

Beardsley Chorale opened the annual ETHS Chorale Concert on February 19 with an old story brought up to date, "Joseph and The Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" by Webber. Written in 1969, the piece was based on an Old Testament story from the book of Genesis. Special effects included biblical costumes worn by the singers, and accompaniment by drums and harmonica.

Mr. Avon Gillespie's Bacon Chorale performed two short pieces by Palestrina, "Kyrie" and "Gloria" from Missa Ad Fugam, and a longer work, "Therefore Watch That Ye Be Ready," written in the 17th century by Hammerschmidt. Instrumentalists and soloists accompanied the group.

Antonio Vivaldi's Gloria was sung by the combined Boldwood and Michael Chorales under the co-direction of Mr. Milner Seifert and Dr. Richard Rosewall. The work, which consisted of ten movements sung by chorus and soloists, was accompanied by a chamber orchestra directed by Mr. Siefert. In order to create a formal mood, girls wore floor-length dark skirts and boys wore tuxedos.

"Sounds of '71," the annual ETHS Band Concert, was held March 12, in the auditorium. The 75-member Cadet Band began the program with F. E. Bigelow's "Our Director March," Frank Erickson's "Chorale for Band," and Charles Carter's "Symphonic Overture." "The Free Lance March," performed by the 40-piece Symphonic Wind Ensemble, climaxed the first half of the concert. Selections from Paint Your Wagon and the finale from Symphony No. 1 by Kalinnikov were performed by the Concert Band later in the program.

Three of the five senior soloists were featured at the Symphony Orchestra's Winter Concert on January 15. Boltwood senior Susan Leib sang "Voi Che Sapete" from The Marriage of Figaro, followed by G. C. Menotti's "The Black Swan" from his opera The Medium, sung by Bacon senior Janet Bryant. Pianist Julie Homi, Beardsley senior, played the first movement of Mendelssohn's Piano Concerto No. 2 in D. Minor Op. 40.

Dedicated to the memory of Dr. Martin Luther King, the Symphony Orchestra performed A. Dvorak's Symphony No. 5 in E. Minor Op. 95. Also featured in their program was N. R. Korsakov's "Russian Easter Overture."

Over thirty writers contributed to the prose and poetry which was interpreted and performed by the ten student actors and actresses under the faculty direction of Mr. Curtis Crotty, Mr. Marty Nystrand, and Mrs. Kaye Stewart.

A prologue and epilogue written by Alice Becker, Toby Wosk, Rick Yale, and the directors served to unify the themes and moods of the production. First and second place winners of the 1971 ETHS Original Film Contest, "Near the Woof River" by Fred Simon and "The Dancer" by Alice Becker respectively, were shown and served to divide the production into three sections entitled "Learning," "Loving," and "Leaving."

Students involved in the production were honored at the Pen and Press Tea. Valerie Riggle, who wrote and acted in her original monologue, "The Looney," was awarded the second annual Writer's Showcase Oscar.

"Proceed With Caution", this year's Esande Concert, was performed in-the-round in Social Hall on March 4 and 5.

Thirteen faculty members, including dance artist-in-residence Mrs. Shirley Mordine and Directors Miss Linda Corum and Miss Jackie Radis, guided the sixteen Esande members in producing twelve modern dance numbers. For the first time the group included two boys, Zach Burris and Jim Self, who were praised by Miss Radis for being "two brave young men".

Bacon senior Barb VanKirk, Bacon junior Jim Self, and Michael sophomore Carol Fink, performed solos which they had choreographed. The number, "Butterfingers" featured accompaniment by an IBM 7090 Computer and Digital-to-Sound Transducer. Music by current popular groups, including The Who, The Moody Blues, and The Free Design, was also incorporated in the program.

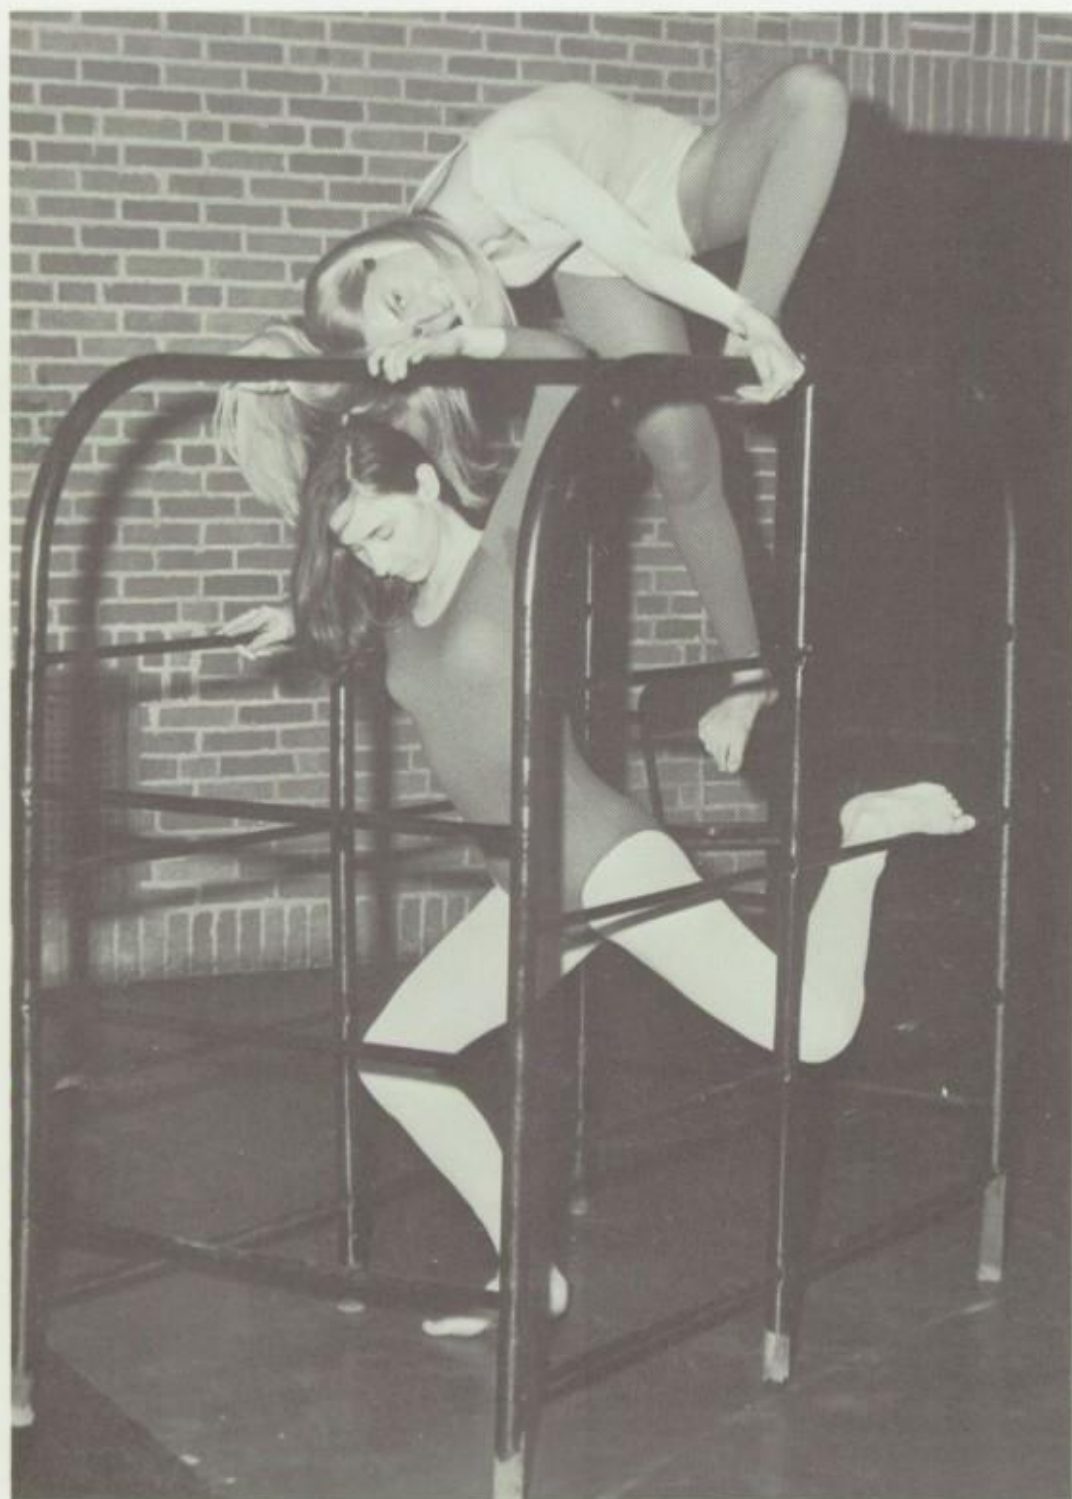

The twelfth annual Aquette Water Show, "Fords, Flappers and Fanatics," was presented on Friday, April 30 and Saturday, May 1. A 72-member cast brought the roaring twenties to life with sketches featuring the stock market crash, dance marathons, racoon coats, and plenty of flappers.

neophytes given leads in how to succeed...

Students who had never before had leads in a school play were given starring roles in How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying, presented April 2 and 3 in the auditorium.

All roles were double cast, making a total of 56 people in the chorus alone. J. Pierrepont Finch, an ambitious young man, played by Gary Litvin and Paul Seifert, adopted the book, How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying as his business bible. In his struggle to rise in the corporate structure of the World Wide Wicket Company, Finch encountered problems with the boss' nephew, Bud Frump, played by Jeff Parkin and Jay Prignano. He also became involved with the boss' mistress, Hedy La Rue, portrayed by Jan Bryant and Colleen Dodson. These incidents led to a final confrontation with the boss himself. J.B. Biggley, played by Bob McCormack and Wes Meyers.

13 different sets were used throughout the play, and the production was supervised by six faculty members.

Musical highlights included "I Believe in You", "The Company Way", "Secretary Is Not A Toy", "Cinderella", and "Brotherhood Of Man".

spring festival replaces all-school play

The Serpent entices Sarah Lansden, as Eve, to take a bite from the forbidden fruit.

Instead of presenting just one all-school play, ETHS experimented with a new concept—The Spring Festival of Performing Arts which was held May 20-28. The festival involved 200 students and included three full-length plays, an opera, and music concerts.

Among the three plays produced by the Speech Arts Department was Joseph Heller's We Bombed in New Haven, a humorous play about the military, directed by Mrs. Christine Friederich and starring Boltwood senior Larry deLooze, Michael junior Dan Geisler, and Boltwood junior Cathy O'Connor. George Feydeau's French farce A Flea in Her Ear was directed by Mr. Bruce Siewerth and starred Michael junior Tina Lambros, Boltwood juniors Mike Mitchell and Lynn Maseman and Boltwood senior David Keneipp. Jean-Claude Van Itallie's The Serpent, a play based on the Book of Genesis, was directed by Mr. William Ditton and featured Beardsley sophomore Jonathan Rothstein and Bacon junior Sara Lansden.

The Music Department presented several works including Puccini's Sister Angelica, an opera with an all-female cast which told the story of an 18th century nun. Featured were Boltwood senior Belinda Glass and Bacon senior Jan Bryant.

The festival also included an Early Music Concert featuring pre-seventeenth century recorder groups and madrigal singing. There was also an original composition concert, with student-written works ranging in style from classical forms to electronic experimentation.

MUSIC FESTIVAL

"lowland seas" lures crowd to festival

Mrs. Jacobson accompanies members of Freshman Glee Club as they sing "Canticle of Praise" during the music festival.

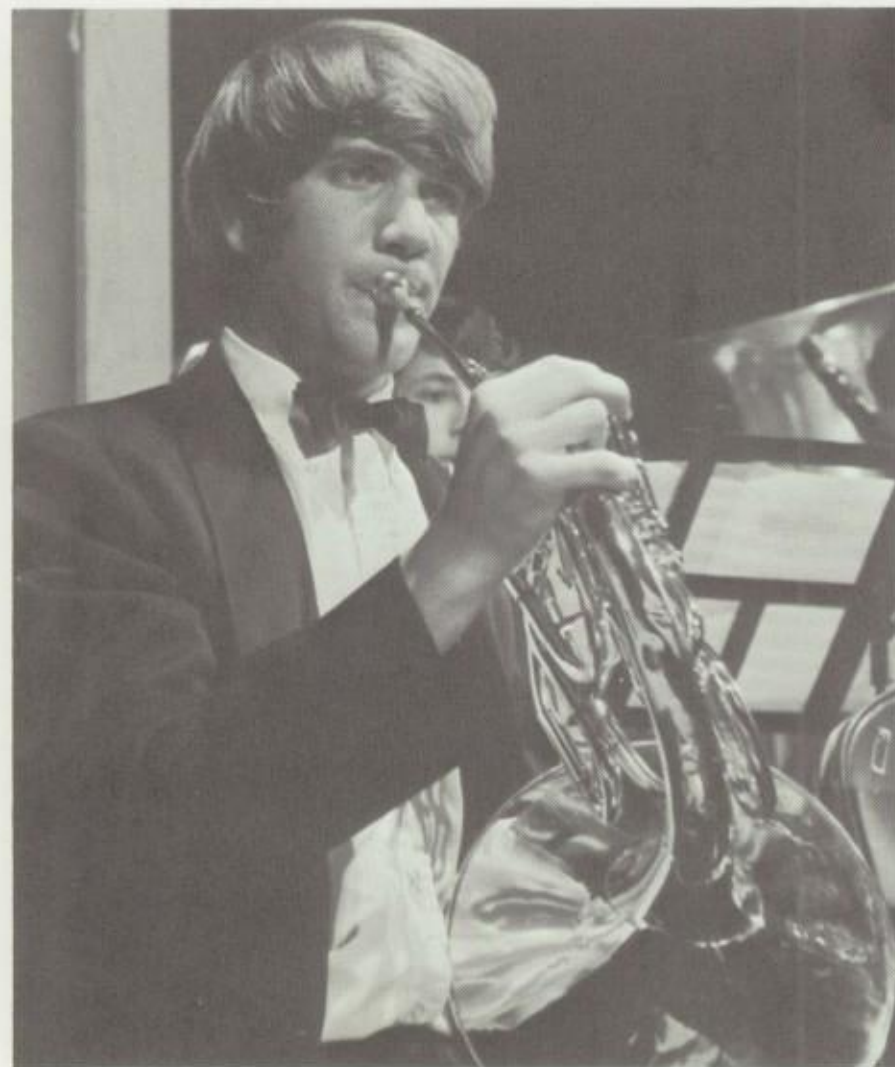

ETHS Music Department held its 39th annual Spring Music Festival in the auditorium on June 4th and 5th. According to Music Director Dr. Richard Rosewall, the aim of the performance was to be "lighthearted and free-wheeling with pop music scattered throughout."

The program Friday was highlighted by a one-act folk opera, The Lowland Sea, by Alex Wilder, presented by Bacon Chorale. Cast members included Nancy Harrington, Jim O'Connor, John Nance, Daniel Baillie, Philip Landon, Nancy Ricker, Robin Goddard, Carol Kazanjian, Brenda Wideman, Dina Gorelick, and Michael Dorn. The show also featured Dr. Richard Rosewall directing the ETHS Choir, Mr. William Idle leading the Concert Band, Dr. Alvin Mistak the Cadet Orchestra, and Miss Helen Keith the Girls' Choir.

Saturday's performance featured three Boltwood senior soloists—soprano Belinda Glass, violinist Elizabeth Mason, and pianist Janet Neiman.

Both shows were interspersed with student-created compositions.

Caryn Stern accompanies Girls Choir in "No Moon, No Stars" by Betty Jacobson during the music festival.

Spirit of Soul members: Amanda Homi, Pat Simmons and Diane Meyers chant in accompaniment to the congonese mass "Missa Luba," as part of the Spirt of Soul's winter concert.

Spirit of Soul director Mr. Avon Gillespie, solos one of his own songs, which was performed at their winter concert.

ALL-SCHOOL ACTIVITIES

eths pays an abortive visit to ed grennan

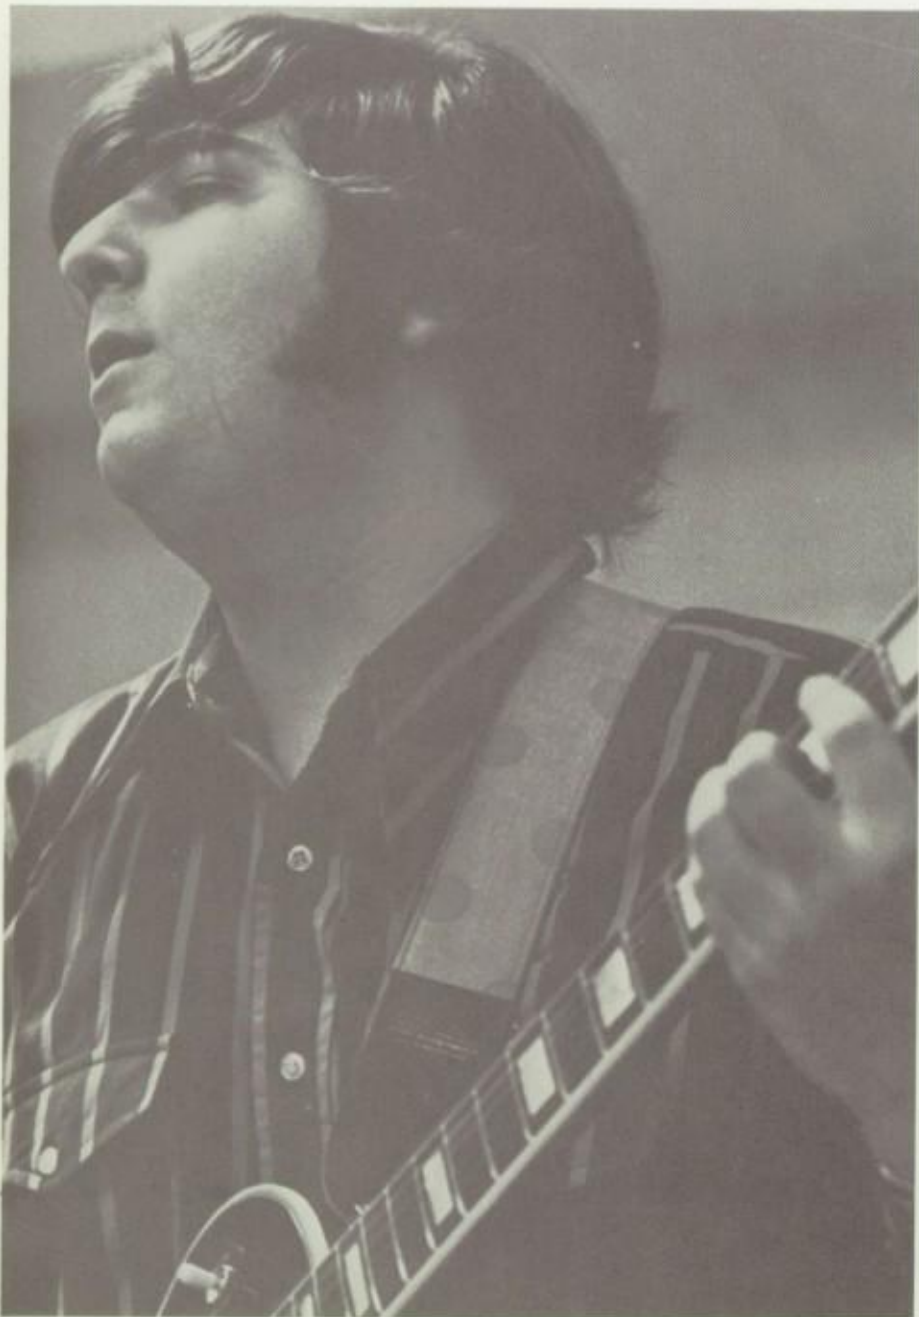

Students participated in a variety of activities. A two-day Black Liberation assembly was held to establish unity within the Black community of the school and to create cultural activities centered around the African heritage and Black consciousness. Israel Independence Day was celebrated with an afternoon assembly to make Jewish students more aware of their identity in the school. During their campaigns, congressional candidates Phillip Crane and Richard Warman came to ETHS to answer questions of the students and faculty. The Radical Left Caucus held a picnic for peace on May 12 on the lawn between the Art Department and the home economics wing and held informal workshops to discuss ways to end the war.

NBC's It's Academic invited ETHS to participate in the program aired July 4. Beardsley senior Warren Lavey, Bacon senior Mark Stolar, and Michael senior Doug Sharps comprised the ETHS team which came in second. Evanston Students For A Better Environment sponsored an empty-can drive on April 24 in which members of the community were invited to dispose of their empty cans at ETHS. The containers went to a redemption center in Chicago. Oral Interpretation showcases were held throughout the year in Little Theater to supplement the activities of Speech Arts classes.

Boys Intramurals sponsored a pudding-eating contest held April 21. Beardsley senior Xavier Gardner won a trophy for eating 84 ounces of pudding in three minutes. Around Halloween, Bacon Girls' Club sponsored a pumpkin-carving contest. The winner's pumpkin was displayed in a showcase.

"Limitations," a jazz composition by Music Teacher Mr. Don Owens, was performed during the Jazz Band Concert held on April 29, along with student- and professionally- composed works. The African, American, classical, spiritual and popular heritages were the themes of a concert given by The Spirit of Soul, directed by Mr. Avon Gillespie, on February 14. "So and So" was the title of three concerts held after school in Boltwood Cafeteria by student musical groups to give students the opportunity to share their musical talents.

retreat, hackney's, bent park build rapport

A weekend retreat in a Wisconsin summer cottage was the scene for Boltwood Council's first annual officers meeting in August. Future activities were planned and a working rapport was established. Council sessions were highlighted by dinner meetings at Hackney's and baseball games at Bent Park. A reg room composed of all council members facilitated communication and allowed meetings to extend through the ten-minute reg periods.

Boltwood Council projects included a canned food drive, a candy sale to raise money for senior prom, a pumpkin-carving contest between grade levels, and two after-school socials dubbed "Boltwood So-and Soss."

Two studies were made during the year concerning the option of pass-fail courses and an open campus system. It was proposed that students carrying five solids be allowed to take the fifth credit on pass-fail if the credit is not necessary for graduation. Results of Pass-Fail Study were submitted to Dr. Torreson for his review.

Beardsley School's traditional Girls' Club and Quadrangle organizations were abandoned this year in favor of the single, co-ed Beardsley Action Group. This service-oriented group raised money for local ecology projects, sponsored the annual canned food drive for needy families on Thanksgiving, and gave a Christmas party for orphans.

bacon council becomes near-suicide victim

During the Bacon Girls' Club Pumpkin-carving Contest two participants enjoy the beginning stages of their jack-o'-lantern.

Four committees were produced from Michael Council under the direction of its president, Steve Miller. Student Exchange Committee, headed by Michael junior Bernie Shoenberg, sponsored three trips to Chicago-area schools. Service Projects Committee, headed by Mark Shayman, sponsored a canned food drive in February and circulated petitions for the creation of an open campus. The two other committees were Social Activities, headed by Lynne Gilbert, and Elections, headed by Barry Miller.

Apathy stymied many attempts by Michael Council to accomplish what it felt were worthy projects. Michael Council member Mark Shayman explained, "Since Council can't communicate with the student body because it's too large and apathetic, the functions the council can serve are not representative ones and can't be by definition. The idea of a representative council at ETHS is impossible."

As a direct illustration of this idea, Bacon Vice President Jody Josephs and other council members adopted the motto "the only good council is a dead council" in their fight to abolish Bacon Student Government. They arrived at this decision based on the evidence that, despite the passage of thirteen resolutions by the council, the only one the administration did permit to stand was a provision allowing any student who attended five meetings to be given a vote in council decisions. As a final move the council motioned to abolish itself, but this was defeated by a slim margin of 6-9.

Esande's affiliation with the Dance Honors class was dissolved this year, as each group followed a different program direction. Dance Honors essentially offered instruction in different dance forms, while Esande concentrated on its spring performance.

In addition to their spring concert, Esande performed twice for Evanston grammar schools and accompanied the ETHS Choir during the Christmas Festival.

Approximately two-thirds of the girls who tried out during Aquettes preliminaries were allowed to participate in final tryouts. Members of the Aquettes Board offered assistance at clinics held prior to final tryouts.

hebrew club attends soviet jewry rally

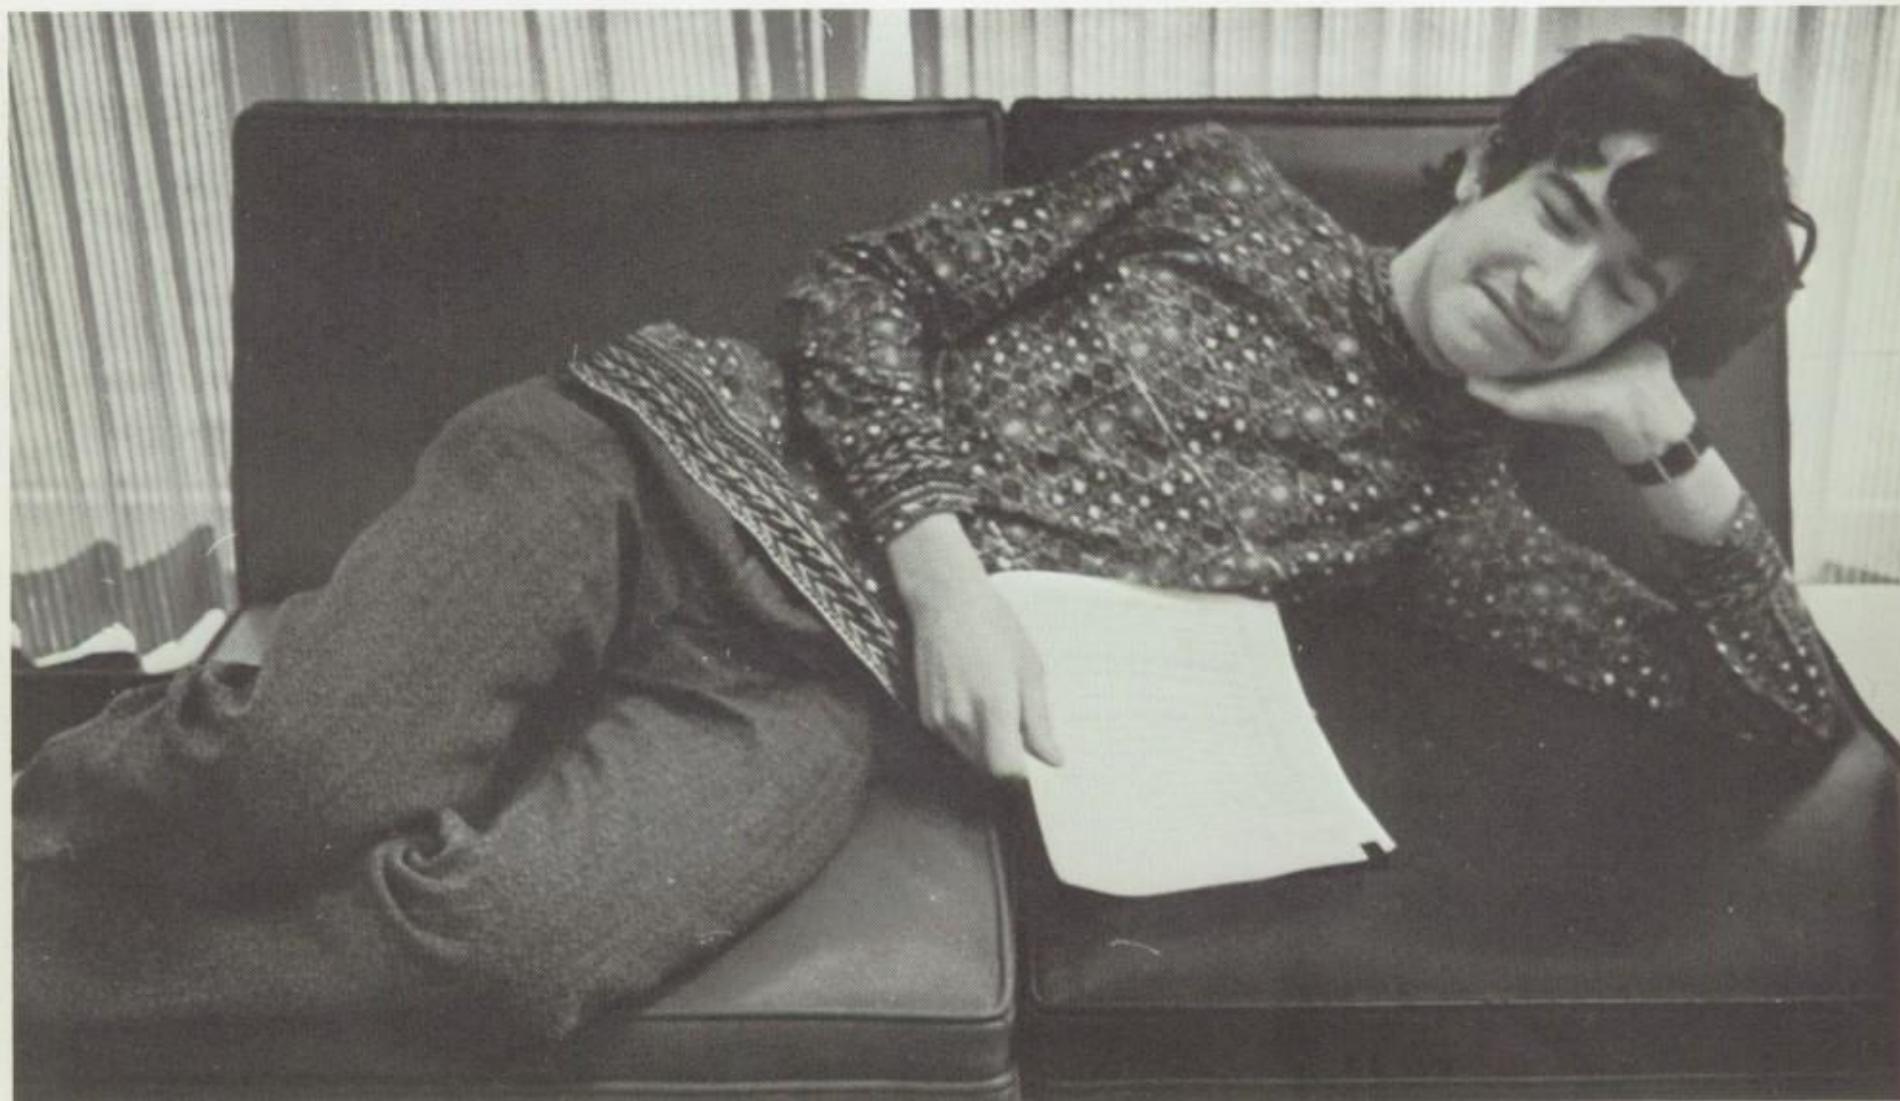

Michael School principal, Mr. Edward Curry, graphically explains the school system in Germany at a German Club meeting.

A variety of activities was planned and sponsored by Hebrew Club, established this year in conjunction with the course under the direction of Mr. Reading Dallal. Members participated in a series of cultural programs, sponsored a group to attend the Soviet Jewry Rally, and celebrated Israeli Independence Day, April 28. An Israeli Festival featuring songs, dancing, and refreshments was organized, and guest speakers and films discussing the Middle East crisis were presented.

Russian Club, sponsored by Mrs. Valentine Dzuibinsky, dealt primarily with the study of Russian culture. Meetings were often comprised of presentations featuring excerpts from Russian poetry and prose or taped recordings of Russian works, supplementing work done in classes. Other activities included guest speakers informing students of Russian life and customs and a Christmas party highlighted by Russian food delicacies and movies.

German Club held its annual Christmas party in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Harold Harris. Students caroled for families associated with the group. Musical accompaniment was provided by a student band and refreshments were served. Michael Principal Mr. Edward Curry participated in a special meeting of the group, discussing his trip to Germany. A visit to the Art Institute to view 19th century portraits was also arranged by their faculty-sponsor, Mr. Thomas Poole.

Communism in Latin America is discussed at a meeting lead by Carlos Figueredo in which students speak and listen to Spanish.

French Club planned three major events for the year. In the fall a bake sale was held to raise money for the projects. The 20 board members met once a month to plan the year's program. A Christmas party was held, featuring a consulate member who lectured on the topic, "French Culture and Christmas Customs in France." A French movie, shown in May, was followed by a discussion. The year concluded with dinner at a French restaurant.

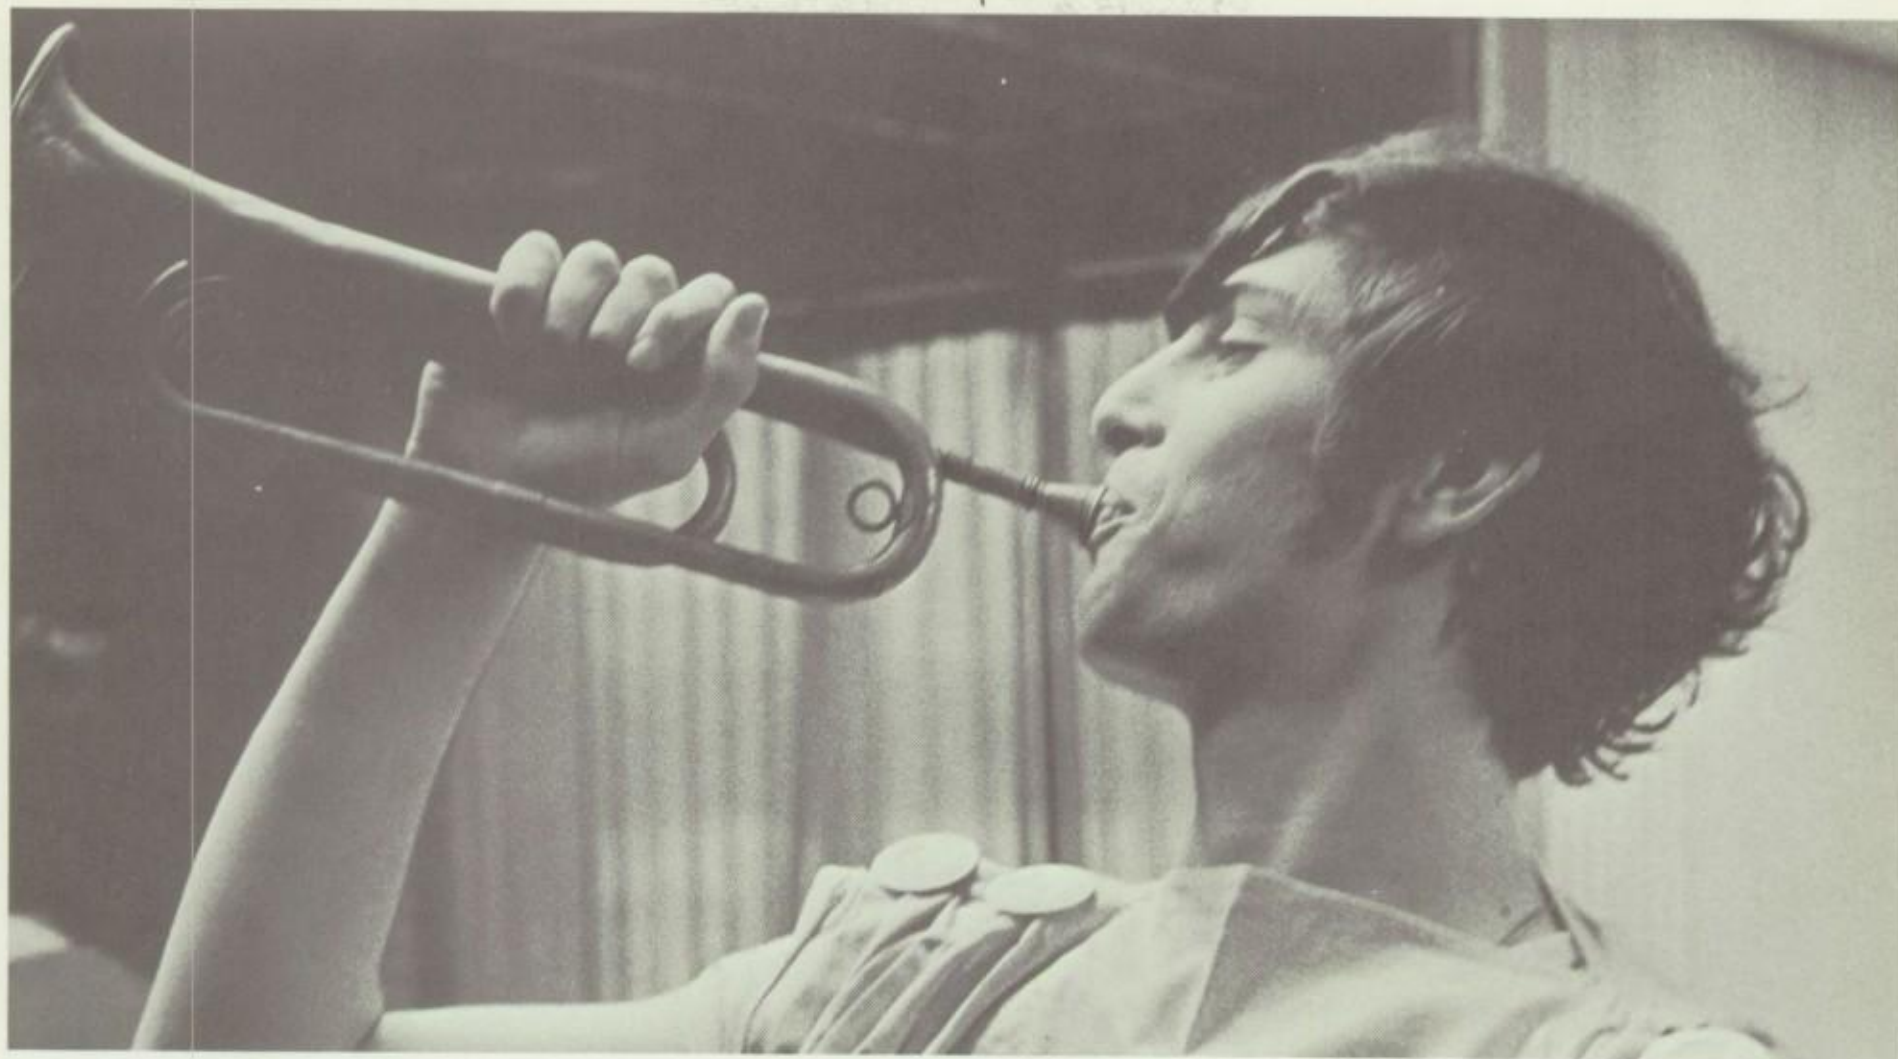

A banquet held on May 6 in the Boltwood Cafeteria, was the major activity of Latin Club. "Tramalchio's Banquet", as it was titled, was attended by approximately 40 students and five faculty members. A Roman atmosphere prevailed as students wore togas, sang, danced, and ate Roman food. Latin Club held a Christmas party which was attended by 30 people.

A float for the Homecoming parade was a new activity for Spanish Club. This project along with three others, highlighted the activities of this year. The annual Christmas party drew a large crowd, and centered around two piñatas. Slides were shown to promote the spring "Mexico Madness" trip to Mexico. In the spring, a round-table discussion on communism was held, in which faculty, Spanish students, and foreign students participated, some of whom had lived in Communist Cuba.

ETHS Jazz Band participated in the Oak Lawn Jazz Band Concert on February 6, 1971. Three voices, a flute, and a clarinet joined the band in its performance of "Limitations," a piece written by Mr. Don Owens, ETHS Music teacher.

Interest in vocal ensembles continued to grow. Ranging from soprano duets to larger co-ed groups, ensembles met for an average of two mods a week and performed before such audiences as National Pediatrics Association and Oakton and Nichols school children.

As a result of seven district festivals held in November, seven ETHS students were selected for the All-State Band which played before the Illinois Music Educators Association at its state meeting at the Pere Marquette Hotel in Peoria, Illinois, on January 23, 1971. The students were Wendy Gellersted, Beardsley senior, string; David Gibson, Bacon junior, percussion; Scott Haigh, Boltwood junior, string; William Levine, Bacon senior, woodwind; Kathy McGee, Beardsley junior, string; Caryn Stern, Beardsley junior, woodwind; and John Weeks, Boltwood senior, string.

benefit concert finances spirit of soul trip

Concertmistress, Elizabeth Mason, leads a small chamber orchestra playing Vivaldi's "Gloria".

"The Spirit of Soul," an interracial singing group composed of 26 students ranging from sophomores through seniors, was "taken out of the realm of novelty and fad and became a real in-depth study of the positive nature of blackness," according to Mr. Avon Gillespie, faculty sponsor. This group performed frequently in the Midwest for a wide variety of audiences, appeared on WTTW Channel 11 TV, and made two 45 r.p.m. records. In order to participate in the Music Educators National Conference, north central division, in Cincinnati, "The Spirit of Soul" held a benefit on February 14 in the ETHS auditorium. Admission proceeds were used to pay for the trip. Their repertoire included children's games, sacred folk music, popular gospel music, and the more classical form, the spiritual.

daily bull wakes up boltwood and beardsley

"For Thursday, September 10, this is the Evanston Township High School Daily Bulletin. I'm Gary Goldblatt along with Debbie Miller reporting," blared through the P.A. systems in Boltwood and Beardsley on the first day of school and continued to wake up both teachers and students every morning. Program Engineer Greg Barman incorporated music with the news to make the broadcast not only informative but also entertaining.

Complete reorganization was undertaken by the Pilot in order to eliminate unnecessary material. An effort was made to make it more interesting by adding pictures illustrating school activities.

More artwork was included in Work Mosaics to make the publication more visually interesting. A shortage of material, caused by a failure on the parts of students and teachers to submit quality work for publication, created a major problem for the staff, enabling Word Mosaics to be published only once every two months. A special April Fool's issue, carrying the theme of "Life As It Really Is," was created to inspire students to submit their creative work.

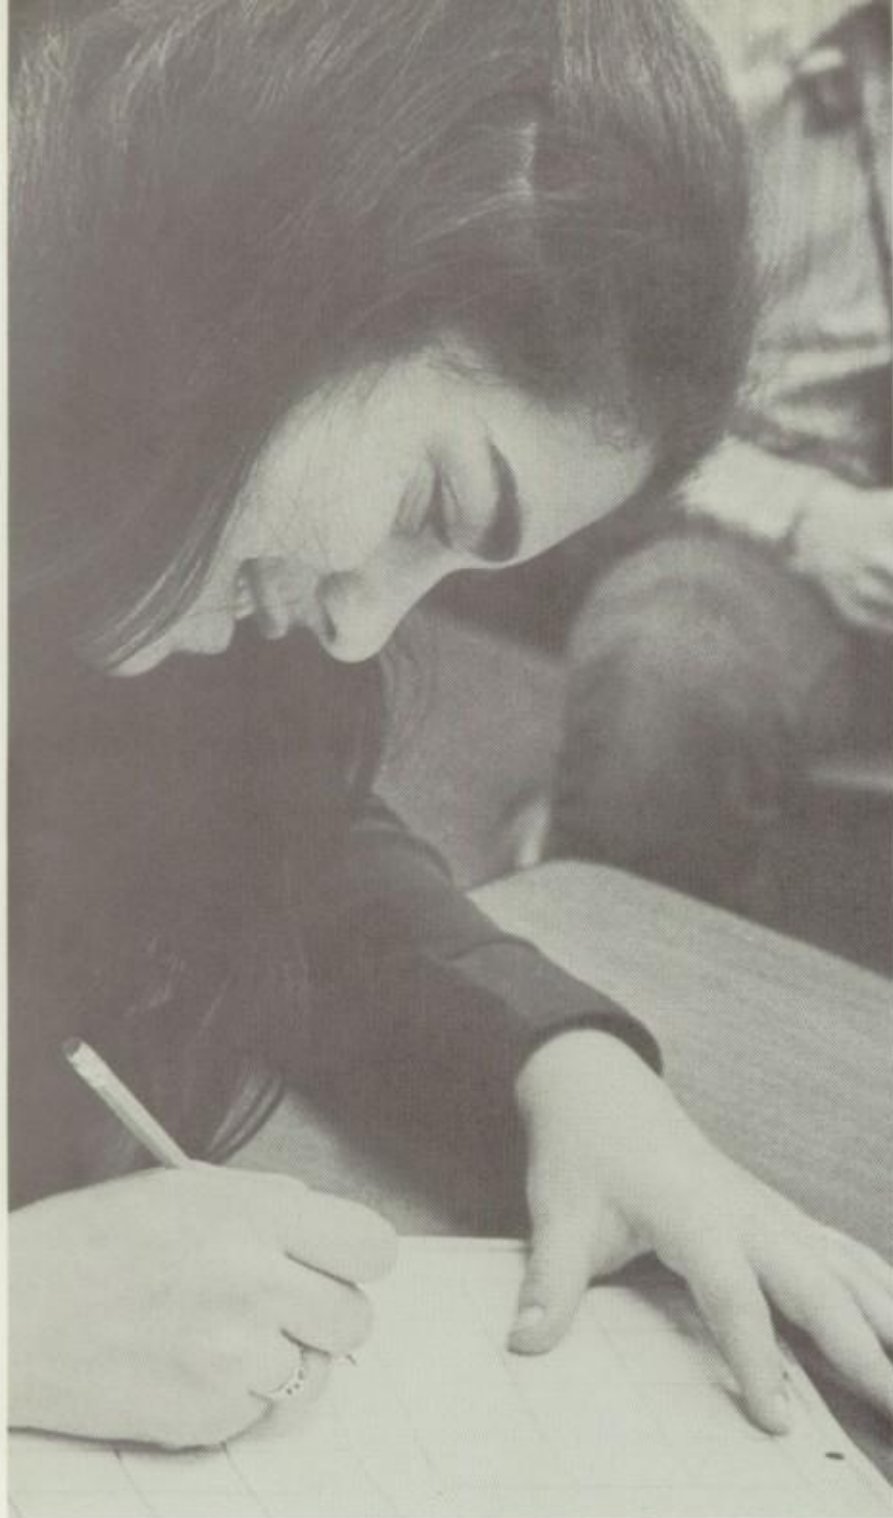

Folksinging Club suffered from a lack of student interest. Although meetings were held every two weeks, the average attendance was between five to ten members. Students failed to bring guitars or records, thus limiting the activities of meetings.

From a publications suite shared with the Evanstonian in the H-corridor, the KEY was moved to the third floor in Boltwood School. The move was prompted by a decision to move the audio-visual equipment, originally housed in both the library and W108, to the purchasing office, forcing purchasing to move into the KEY office.

In its second year as a fall-delivered book, the KEY was cut eight pages from last year's 316, as 185 seniors did not have their pictures taken.

Editor-in-chief Cindy Miller headed a seven-member senior staff who trained the junior apprentices during special sessions held in the early fall.

Assisted by a 19-member senior staff and a 60-member junior staff, Evanstonian Editor-in-Chief Liz Wise expanded the paper's coverage to include eight, eight-page issues throughout the year, including a special political issue published on October 30 which surveyed student political opinion.

Both publications received Medalist ratings, the highest offered by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association. In addition, the KEY was rated A plus by the National School Yearbook Association. The Evanstonian received a first-place All-American rating from the National Scholastic Press Association and was elected president of the Illinois High School Press Association.

seven come eleven to suburban grid title

Coach Murney Lazier orders new defensive maneuvers from the sidelines prior to Evanston's shut-out victory against Niles.

Despite an opening game loss to highly-touted Hinsdale Central, the Wildkits settled down to race through seven straight games on the way to their eleventh Suburban League title in 15 years.

Coach Murney Lazier put together an explosive attack featuring running backs Howard Jones and John Posey and the pinpoint passing of quarterback Willie Miller to senior end Jim Archier. Ron Pettinger, middle linebacker, anchored a superb defensive unit which gave up only six Suburban League points.

The Kits' encounter with the New Trier East Indians proved to be an exciting contest. Senior quarterback Willie Miller scored the first touchdown in the first quarter. An early third quarter score was set up by Tyrone Williams' run of 47 yards. Jim Archier tallied the final points in the game on a pass from junior quarterback Shawn Lazier. The Kits routed their long-time rival with a final score of 34-6.

fire hydrant, suburban and state titles seized

When the Varsity booters walked off the field of their last season game with a 1-0 win over New Trier East, they not only carried with them the coveted Fire Hydrant but the Suburban and State Championship as well. By posting a perfect 14-0-0 record, the Kits extended their unbeaten streak which, with the help of the two previous varsity teams, stood at thirty wins.

Achieving Suburban recognition were halfbacks Bob Shook, Pat Staine, and Don Macrae, forwards Tim McGonagle and Larry Weisgal, and fullbacks Ken Wolf, and Jeff Thiel. Kickers Staine, McGonagle, Macrae and Thiel received All-State positions with Weisgal receiving honorable mention.

Coach Ken McGonagle, gave special credit to fullback Bond Mui, who rose from a slow start in the early season to make a strong comeback, helping Evanston win its title.

Steve Inbody happily strides toward the finish line after lapping the other runners in the Evanston Invitational.

ETHS was forced to pull out of the Crystal Lake Invitational on September 5 and the Proviso West Invitational on September 12 because of a ruling that a team must be in school for five days before it can enter in competition.

The Crystal Lake meet was rescheduled and was held on September 19. When Mike Geldermann nosed out his Maine West opponent, Dean Kamin, by one point, he helped give the Kits their third consecutive victory at Crystal Lake, defeating Maine West by one point, 44-45. The Proviso West meet was not rescheduled.

Maine East and Fremd-Palatine provided tough competition for the harriers in the state meet at Peoria. Don Franklin took 12th, Ron Fick 16th, Dave Ingraham 17th, Mike Geldermann 64th, Tom Hartzell 75th, Larry Bates 87th, and Marty Brevick 93rd. Maine East finished first in the meet with 129 points, Fremd-Palatine was second with 139, and ETHS finished third with 193.

Hugh Hoffman carefully contemplates his final dive before taking off at the I.H.S.A. State Meet at Evanston.

Thousands of spectators saw seven state records broken in the ETHS natatorium during the Fortieth Annual Illinois High School State Swimming Championships televised by WGN Channel 9 on Friday, February 26 and Saturday, February 27. ETHS Varsity Tankers played host to sixty-six high school in the preliminary competition on Friday.

Though Hinsdale Central was predicted to steal the meet, it was a close race between second-place New Trier East, with 137 points, and third-place Evanston, with 131 points. Outstanding scorers for Evanston were Randy Whitchurch, Dave Gustafson, Duane Love, and Gary Price of the third-place 200-yard medley relay team; Duane Love, third place winner of the 100-yard butterfly; Randy Whitchurch, second-place winner of the 100-yard backstroke and 200-yard individual medley. Also competing for Evanston in the state meet were George Keenan, Brad Nedrud, and Brian Smith. Hugh Hoffman placed fourth in the diving competition.

For their outstanding contribution in this meet, four Evanston swimmers were named to the 1971 All-State Swimming Team: Randy Whitchurch, Duane Love, Dave Gustafson, and Gary Price.

GYMNASTICS

wildkits defend suburban championship

Howard Rubin gracefully performs a swinging leg cut during the Evanston Invitational Meet, in which Evanston placed fourth.

Pride, prestige, and power guided the Evanston gymnastics team toward their eleventh consecutive victory in the Suburban League. High-scorers Tom Fogel, free exercise; Tom Stearns, side horse; Bill Austin, trampoline; Nelson Gaines, parallel bars; Keith Martin, rings; and Gary Odeen, all-around; highlighted the meet.

Led by Gary Odeen in total points, Wildkit gymnasts gained experience and consistency of performance. A tremendous team effort supported the team throughout competition.

Sweeping through the sectional and district meets with comfortable margins of victory, the team wound up the season with a strong third place finish in State. Hinsdale Central, the team tabbed as the club to beat, followed that prediction as they amassed a total of 142 points, claiming the number one spot. Five Evanston men qualified for the state finals, giving fine performances. Tom Fogel and Bill Austin claimed seconds in their events, and Dave Onderdonk, high bar, placed fourth in state. Mike Rowe, trampoline, summed up the team's success this year with the comment, "It was a good year, but it could have been better."

Wildkit matmen finished third in the district meet. Jim Parham, Karl Johnson, and Albert Meredith triumphed in the Wheeling Sectional, allowing them to go to the downstate wrestling finals in Champaign.

Albert Meredith gained the state wrestling championship title for ETHS in the 155-pound weight bracket. Evanston had not previously captured the title for four consecutive years. Juniors Karl Johnson and Jim Parham lost in very close matches at the downstate contest, but Coach Elias George said, "Their lack of experience and confidence in themselves hurt them. But with another year, I hope they'll get a little more dedicated to get back down there."

kits nab suburban, retain state crown

Completing the baton transfer from Warren Allston, Howard Jones dashes off on the final lap of the meet against Maine South.

After climaxing an undefeated indoor season with a routine victory over Thornton, the Kits nabbed the Suburban League title from last year's outdoor champion, Oak Park, by 76 points, and defended the state title with a score of 24 points.

Defending 100-yard and 220-yard dash state champion Howard Jones broke district records with a 9.6 in the 100 and a 21.3 in the 220. Jones also anchored the record-breaking quartet of Joe Stewart, Warren Allston, and Gary Starks in the 880-yard relay, posting the state's fastest time for the event with a 1:28.3. Don Franklin broke the 2-mile record to win in 9:24.6. At Champaign, Jones broke the state record of 9.6 seconds for the 100-yard dash, and broke the 220-yard dash record in 21.1 seconds.

Although Morton East won the SL Championship, four of the Kits made the Suburban League team, including Ron Pettinger, Tim McGonagle, Ken Wolf, and Neal Halperin.

Coach Ken McGonagle strengthened the infield by placing five players there, reviving a team strategy of a few years ago. He employed practically the entire pitching staff in the regionals, including Gary Seltzer, Neal Halperin, Charles Brown, Peter Zullo, and Dave Needleman.

This year's team was highly successful in last year's summer league, taking the North Division Summer League Championship as well as winning the State Summer League championship in a victory of 4-1. The latter game was played at Comiskey Park.

racquetmen net sixth place in state meet

Varsity Tennis began optimistically this year with such highlights as a 6-0 victory over Proviso East, and a 3-2 win over the Niles East Trojans, but the team lost strength in the Suburban League and State meets.

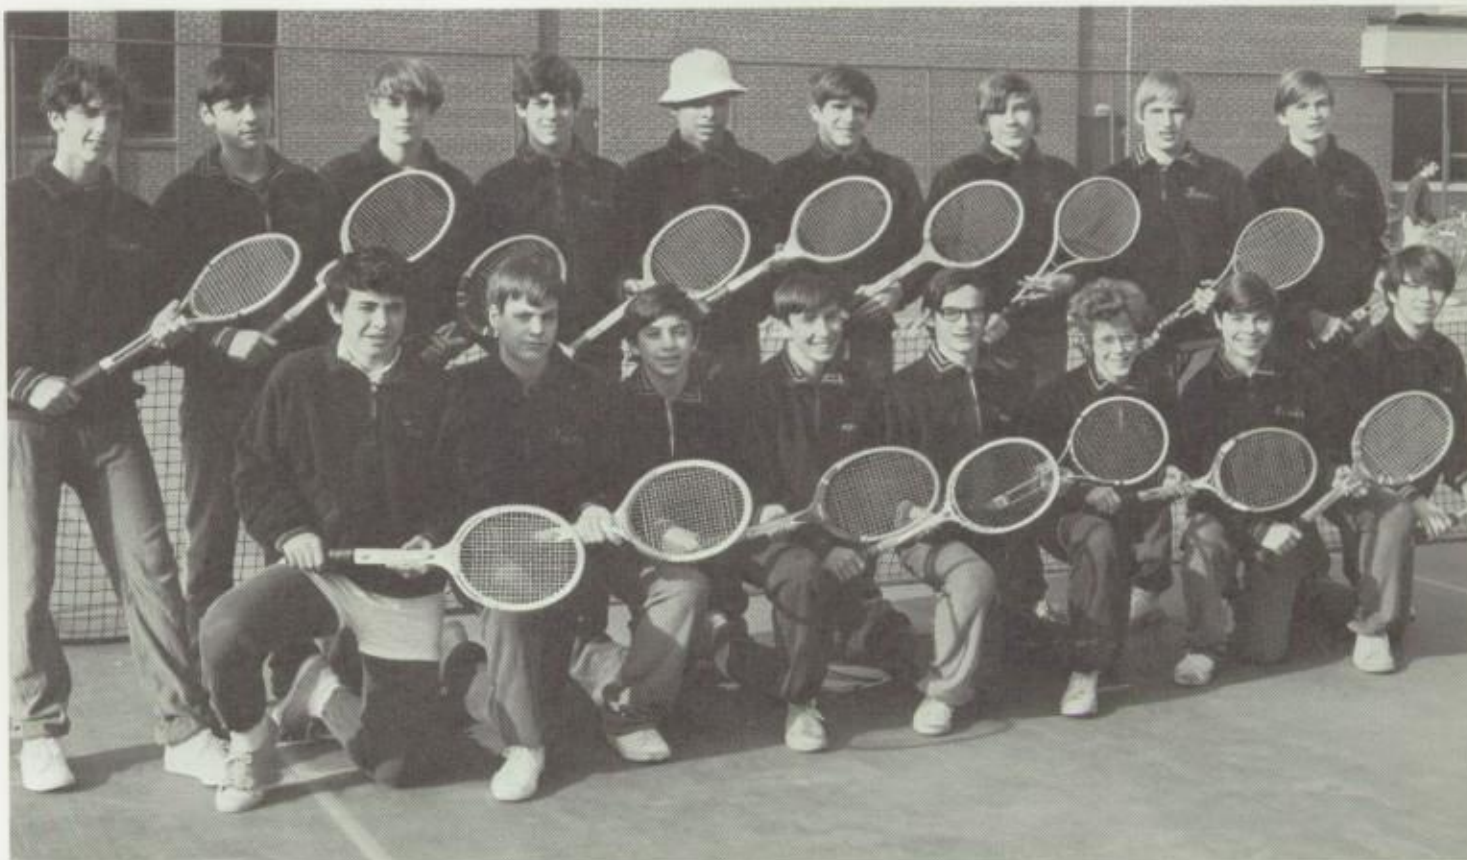

The Suburban League match, in which Evanston placed fourth, boasted Eric Friedler as the singles winner. In the state meet, Friedler beat his opponents from Highland, Rock Island, Lake View, and Arlington, before succumbing to Grey King of Peoria Richwoods. The doubles team of Steve Casati and Greg Nagle bowed out to New Trier East after defeating Maine South, Geneva, and Arlington. The Wildkits took sixth place in the State meet.

Wildkit defenseman Andy Lareau makes headway while running the ball in a rush downfield against New Trier.

Having achieved interscholastic standing, lacrosse team members received letter awards at all levels this year. The sport was first introduced to the ETHS program in 1959. Playing a seven-game schedule, the team drew spectators interested in the possibilities offered by the event. The varsity team met tough competition throughout the season, but Frosh-Soph players extended their no-loss record for the fourth year. Several players were considered for university scholarships.

The ETHS golf team completed one of its most successful seasons with an undesirable finish, losing the Suburban League Championship by one stroke. John Houghtlin, Chuck Irons, and Bill Post led the team with their impressive performances.

coed rollerskating is all-around favorite

During afterschool gym, an intramural participant shoots for the basket and misses.

Voluntary after-school programs sponsored by the GPE and BPE Departments offered increased opportunities for participation in various sports. Coed activities, including volleyball, rollerskating, badminton, and softball, were scheduled in an effort to spark interest and increase participation. The informal coed games generated sufficient interest to justify organized competition by school teams.

Girls Intramurals stimulated individual and team competition through Girls Olympics, swimming and gymnastics meets, and badminton and tennis tournaments. Basketball, softball, speedball, and track were among the other events organized. Students also practiced golfing skills at an Evanston course under the direction of teacher-supervisor, Mrs. Sharon Morey. Girls Sports Board planned a dessert and a sports award evening to recognize award winners and present the Intramural trophy.

Boys Intramurals offered a host of activities, ranging from flag football, cross country, gymnastics, wrestling, volleyball, and track, to free throws, basketball, table tennis, badminton, tennis, and softball. The year was highlighted by a successful and new event, the Eating Contest, won by Beardsley senior Xavier Gardner.

Increased participation and team spirit drove the Girls Interscholastic Badminton Team to earn first place in their divisional competition.

Capping a successful season, the Girls Interscholastic Tennis Team won placement in a better league for the 1971-1972 tournament competition.

Senior Leaders officiated at basketball games, gymnastics meets, and the Girls Olympics and acted as student teachers in regular GPE classes.

Girls trying out for cheerleading were picked for their ability, agility, appearance and performance. Judges had not two, but three teams to select with the introduction of a squad of eight JV cheerleaders.

The JV teams lacked the support and spirit found in the varsity games. The cheerleaders, by attending the JV games, helped create enthusiasm and support. Many involved and connected with the results brought by the new cheerleaders acclaimed the girls to be assets to the teams.

It was proposed last year that with the addition of the JV squad, sophomore and varsity team sizes would be cut to six, yet this year the sophomore had eight, the varsity nine.

A squad of ten Willie Wildkits were selected in the spring of 1970 for the '70-'71 sports season. Girls were selected on the basis of spirit and agility by a panel of judges. Assignments were made for the various games, although many girls often attended games voluntarily. Willies alternated positions, each participating in a half of each game, with two girls assigned to each game.

grade-school swimmers increase to 260

Maryanne Kelly vigorously swings around the lower bar of the unevens in preparation for her dismount.

Sports Board publicized after-school sports for girls. Participants received points for coming to these activities. The boards then tallied up the points for individuals and for the separate schools.

Awards were distributed at the Sports Desserts, which took place three times during the year. The fall and winter desserts honored outstanding participants in those seasons, while a banquet, held in the spring, awarded trophies to the four schools. New Sports Board Presidents were announced and Aquettes and Cheerleaders were named for the school year 1971-72.

Aquatic Staff offered training to Evanston grade-school swimmers in skills ranging from basic swimming strokes to advanced technique in water ballet and diving. After 15 years of instruction, the program was expanded to meet an increased enrollment of 260 girls and boys, aged 7-13.

Seventy-two Aquatic Staff students were selected to teach in the volunteer program. Selection was based on passing a test on swimming basics, giving consideration to past swimming experience. Many of the girls were members of Aquettes and the boys had had previous experience in the summer swimming program.

Tryouts were held for Girls Selected Gymnastics in the spring and fall. This honors group met once a week after school to master advanced stunts on unevens, evens, trampoline, horse, and balance beam. No competition was scheduled with other schools, but an intramural meet was held in the spring.

SENIOR ACTIVITIES

beanie and gumball sales finance prom

Senior movie photographers Johann Maurer, Bob Lieberman, and David Keneipp use the ETHS roof to get unusual angle shots.

Approximately 35 seniors were honored at the annual Scholarship and Awards Program on Wednesday, June 9 in the auditorium. Tim McGonagle of Bacon won the Cunningham Award and Boltwood's Linda Wallenberg received the Senior Girl's Honor Award. Other presentations included the Rebecca Crown Award, the Bowman Award, the Gehlbach Award, the DeSwarte Award, and twelve various community- and college-sponsored scholarships.

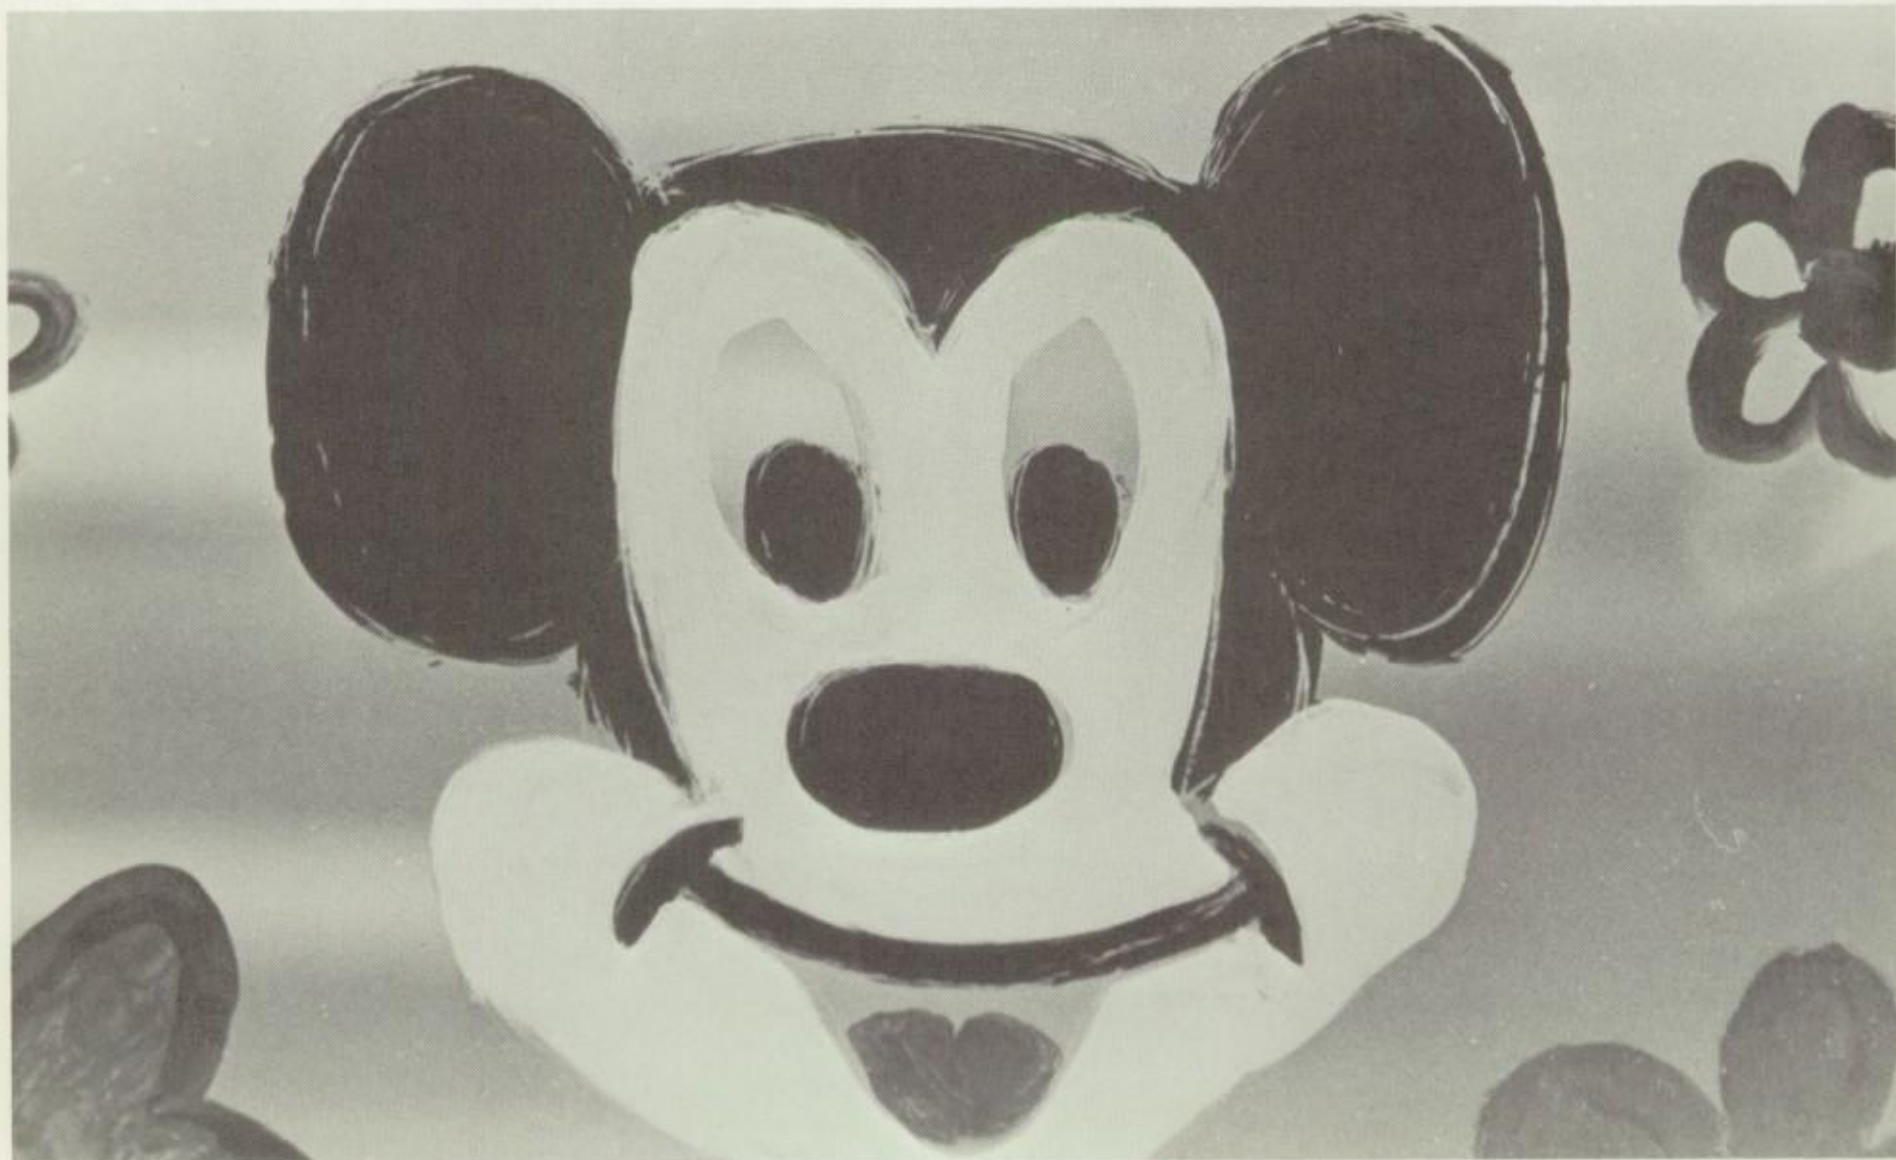

Boltwood's senior Homecoming float, which featured a likeness of Willie Wildkit sweeping the floor with a Proviso Pirate broom, was awarded first place at the Pep Rally. A kazoo band immediately celebrated the first-place announcement.

Senior Ditch Day found ETHS well-represented at Wrigley Field at the Cubs' opening game on April 6.

Boltwood seniors challenged the faculty to a basketball game in April, but lost with a score of 90-50.

A car rally was sponsored by Beardsley and Michael seniors in November and ended in a party for those who had correctly followed the clues.

Prom fund-raising was accomplished through T-shirt and beanie sales. The lounges also featured money-making machines, including Beardsley's juke box and Bacon's gumball machine.

Mickey Mouse smiles benignly at the antics of the senior lounge.

prom tickets offered at lower price

Before entering the ballroom of the O'Hare Inn, Amy Matthews carefully adjusts the tie of her Prom date, Joe Hermann.

ETHS seniors planned and participated in four diverse commencement programs. Bacon and Michael School Commencements were held June 16 and Beardsley and Boltwood School Commencements were held June 17 in the auditorium, followed by a reception in Michael cafeteria and court.

Both Boltwood and Michael School Commencements opened with "Sine Nomine" by Vaughn-Williams, "Processional: Honor's Days" by Latham, and "The National Anthem" by Key and Smith, played by the Symphonic Wind Ensemble. Each was brought to a close with a benediction, made by Boltwood senior William Kerr and Michael senior Stephen Goodman, the school cheer song, and "Rise, Rise for Evanston."

Musical entertainment for Boltwood and Michael Commencements included pieces by Tchernin, Mozart, Kodaly, Stravinsky, Hindemith, and Edmundson. Bacon School seniors Robert Birndorf, Samuel Hammer, Jody Joseph, and Mark Stolar presented "The Day Before Tomorrow," a dramatic interpretation, during their commencement. Beardsley Commencement was the only one to feature an original song, "Take Some Time To Live," with music composed by Beardsley senior Linda Ikenn and lyrics written by Beardsley senior Debra Miller. The original piece was performed by selected Beardsley senior and underclass singers.

Approximately 200 couples attended the senior prom, held in the Grand Ballroom of the O'Hare Inn on June 14. Ticket prices were lower than last year as refreshments were served instead of a full-course dinner. Entertainment was provided by a soul group, "The Pieces of Peace."

While two bands alternate in the background, a multitude of Prom couples crowds the Grand Ballroom of the O'Hare Inn.

COMMENCEMENT

Following the Bacon School graduation ceremony, parents and friends enjoy a reception in Michael cafeteria.

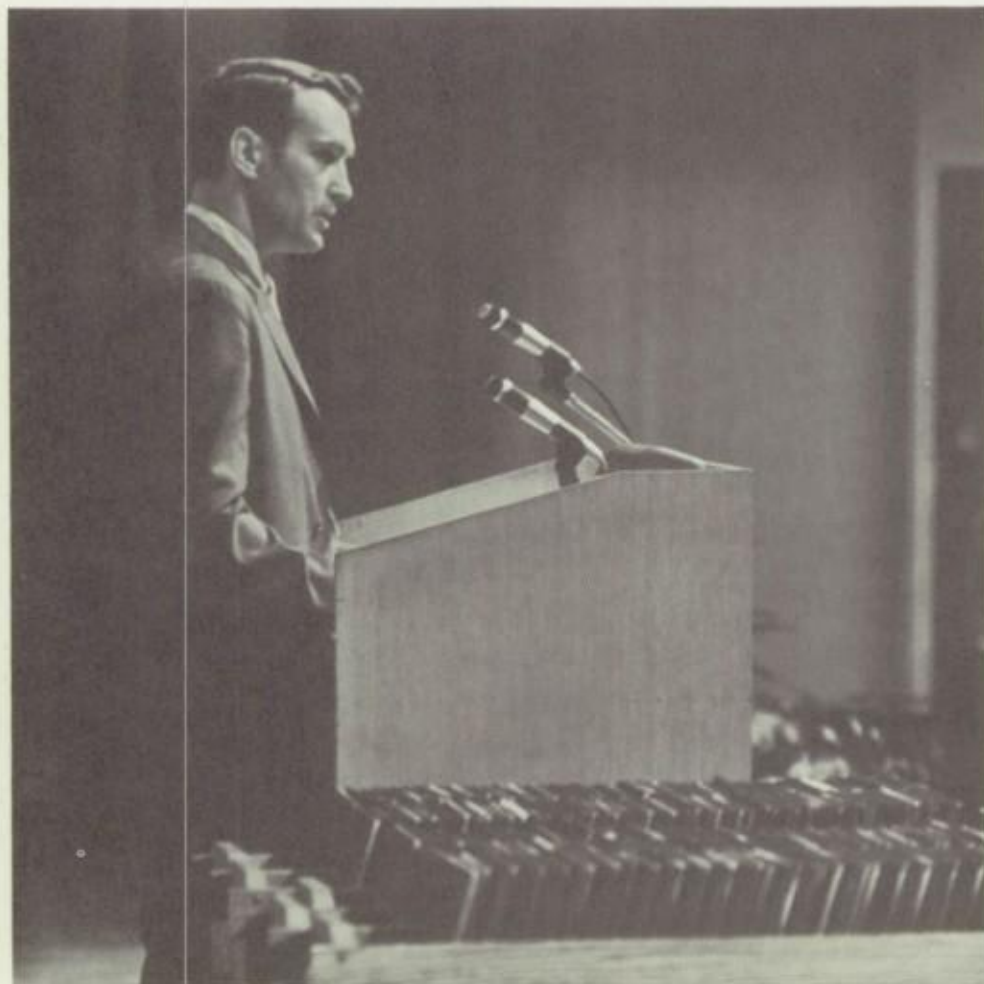

The end of school is reflected in the face of Roberta Fisher.

Elizabeth Miller, Phil Kazanjian, Carlos Figueredo, and Leslie Fink provide the music at the Michael School graduation.

Mr. Phillip McDevitt presents the Beardsley School graduating class to the audience.

Dr. Clyde Slocum prepares to distribute diplomas at the Boltwood School commencement.

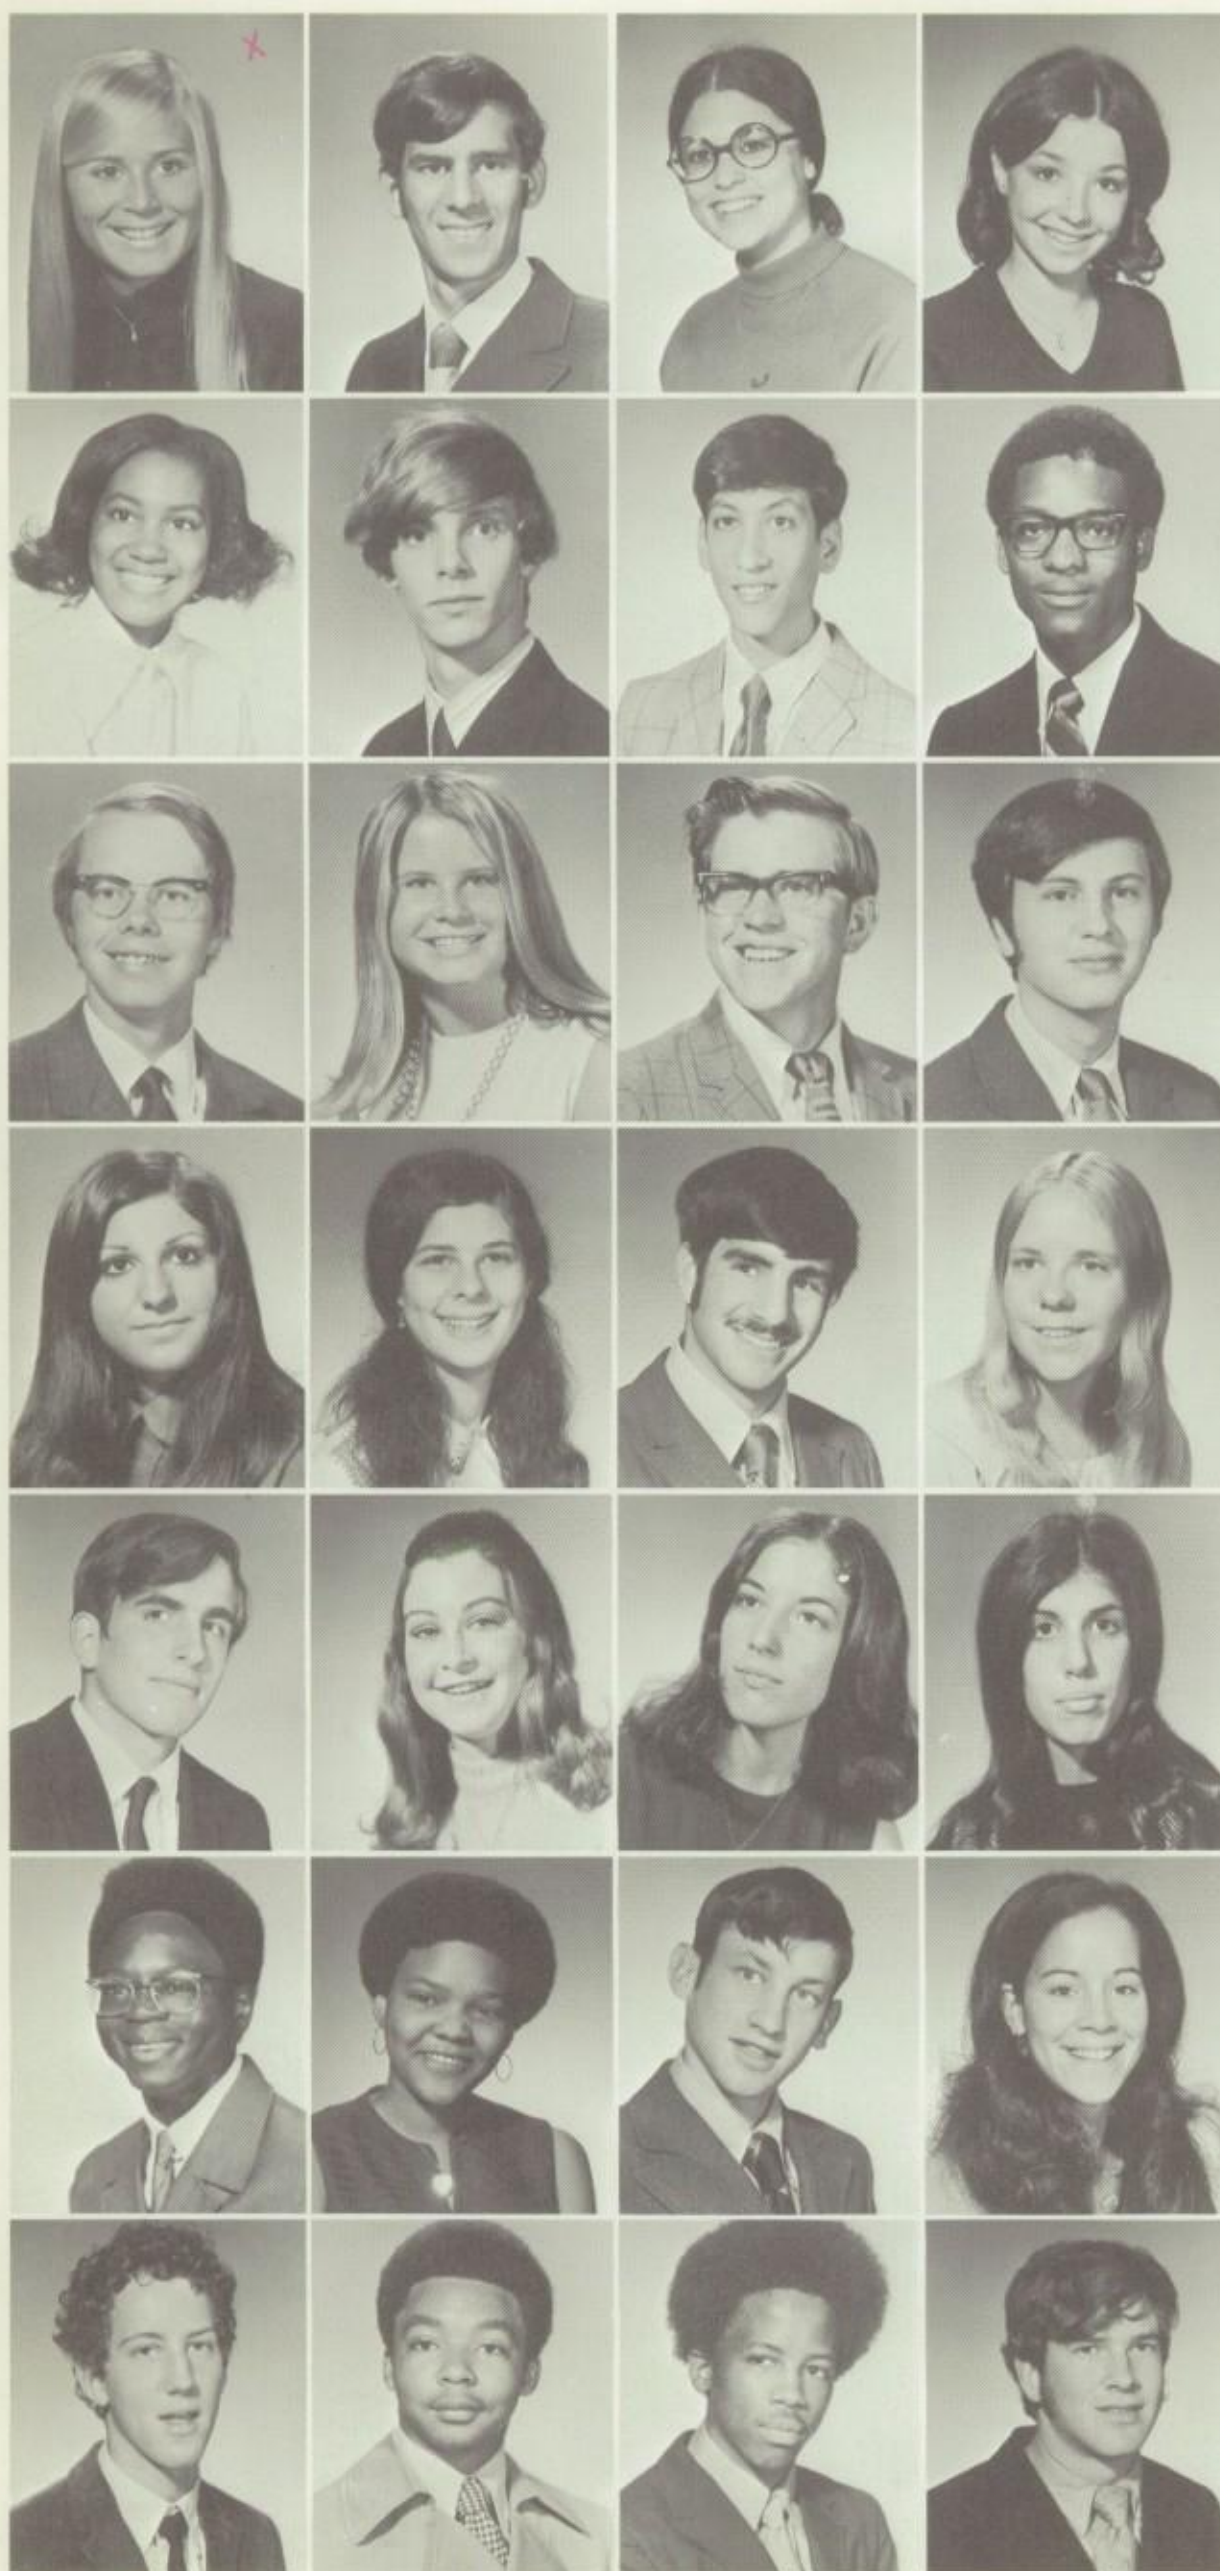

Cary Brazitis receives his diploma from Mrs. Robert Mayo of the School Board and Mr. Robert Trevarthen, Bacon School principal.

*We are the shades of students past
Who tread the halls and corridors,
Inspecting our lost engravings
Amidst the student bodies present,
We tread unceasingly.*
